TWO LAWRENCE STRIKERS PUT UNDER ARREST

LAWRENCE, Jan. 13.—Two arrests were made shortly after noon when the mills let out. Antros Strovink of No. 36 Union street and Nellie Rurock of No. 40 Haverhill street were arrested in front of the Everett Mill. They stopped men and women at work and tried to get them to strike. Policemen swooped down on them and took them to the station house, after lumps of coal from a passing wagon had been hurled at the building and several windows had been broken.

The Everett Mill shut down indefinitely at noon. This is an independent concern and employs from 3,000 to 3,200 men and women. Agent Milliken said:

"We have closed indefinitely. We shall remain closed until the situation rights itself."

President Wood Encouraged.

President William M. Wood of American Woolen Company says: "The situation at Lawrence has decidedly improved, and is very encouraging this morning. The Washington mill is substantially running full. A large complement of the help came into the Wood mill this morning, and more into Ayer mill than we expected. The situation is rapidly clearing itself, as the employes, especially the foreign help, better understand the question. We have every reason to believe that the result would have been better if it had not been a Saturday morning. We hope that next week the situation will be better understood by all the employes, and that there will be no further trouble."

While members of Battery C and the Ninth Regiment of the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia waited to be called, should trouble begin to-day as a result of the strike of 12,000 textile workers, Mayor Scanlon took action toward ending the strike through arbitration.

The Mayor appointed Alderman Robert S. Mahoney and Cornelius S. Lynch as a committee to confer with the leaders of the strike and with their employers to see if some basis of settlement could not be reached.

But one attempt to incite trouble was discovered by the 135 policemen and firemen on duty in the mill district. A mill worker named Peter Delowski appeared before the Washington Mills and began to harrangue a crowd that quickly collected. He was for violence and a repetition of the attack made yesterday on the Duck Company.

Hustled Off by Police.

The speaker had hardly got warmed up when he was grabbed by Policemen Barrett and Shakarilla and hustled off in a patrol wagon to the station house. The crowd slunk away.

The next trouble was at the Pacific Mills. Two hundred of the best machinists, English speaking men, walked out. They struck because of the reduction in pay, which ranges from 30 to 70 cents each a week to the strikers.

Leo Phillips of New York was held in the police court to-day on the charge of exciting a riot. He is about twenty-five years of age and had twelve new $10 bills in his pocket. He could not furnish bail in $1,000 and was locked up. Six others, including a woman, were held in $1,000 for disturbing the peace. All of these were arrested yesterday. Phillips's head could hardly be seen for bandages that testified to the activity of the policemen's clubs.

Judge Mahoney in a strong speech told the police to be sure to arrest anyone that disturbed the peace.

"Law and order must and will be maintained in Lawrence, no matter who is arrested," said Judge Mahoney.

A mass meeting held at City Hall today was adjourned until this afternoon. Joseph J. Ettor of New York and president of the Industrial Workers of the

THOUSANDS ON TRAINS ARE FROST BITTEN

The New Haven Railroad brought thousands of commuters into Boston to-day hanging to the platforms and the steps of the cars. There were not cars enough on any of the early suburban trains into Boston. All trains were late in and out of Boston. The company admitted its failure to handle the people and blamed it on the cold weather.

Commuters have put up with late trains almost every day this Winter on all divisions of the New Haven road. As the weather grew colder conditions grew worse. To-day on the coldest day of the year people were brought into Boston packed into cars, the platforms crowded and people clinging to the steps.

Patrons of the road arrived at the South station with frost-bitten ears and fingers. Kindly disposed passengers yielded their places inside the door of the car to others on the platforms who were suffering from frost-bite.

Frostbitten Noses.

Train No. 72, the Federal express from Washington to Boston, due here at 7 a. m., pulled in at 9:30. No. 32, the Adams express from New York, due here at 6:24, was just leaving New London at 9:15. Other New York trains were about thirty minutes late. The train from Fall River, which takes passengers from the boat, was forty minutes late. All suburban trains average about thirty minutes late.

One train rolled into the South Station about 8:30 that carried many pairs of frozen ears and frost-bitten noses. A crowd had gathered at the Harvard street station of this branch of the New Haven road. They were there to take the 7:46 express, but since the cold spell struck Boston that express has never run on schedule time.

Finally, a train puffed in at 8:15—the first train for about three-quarters of an hour. This train was pretty well filled, and it was simply impossible for the waiting crowd at Harvard street to get on. The people piled on and formed themselves into the cars, pressing together so that there was hardly breathing space. So desperate were some of the men and women that they climbed on the platforms between the cars and stood there while the train ran into the South station.

Women Stand Cold Best.

The thermometer was several degrees below zero—something that those riding on the platform did not appreciate at the time they started. But it soon became apparent. Ears began to whiten and fingers began to get stiff. In several instances men were grabbed and forced inside to save their ears. When the train reached the South Station some of the men could hardly walk. Some of them were compelled to consult doctors. Rubbing their hands and ears others remained in the station, suffering intense pain until their ears and fingers regained normal proportions and conditions.

Strange to say, the women stood it best. They had their heads wrapped up and the intense, freezing cold was kept away from their ears and noses.

MAN, 80, HOMELESS FOR HALF CENTURY

Frank M. McGowan, eighty years old, arraigned in the South Boston District Court on a charge of "having no home," told Associate Justice Logan that John Howard Payne's "Home, Sweet Home," had meant nothing to him for more than half a century. "I have no home, judge," he said weakly, "and have had none for more than fifty years." McGowan was found by the police of the City Point Station half frozen and his right arm injured in a stable on Second street, South Boston. He was given three months in the House of Correction. "You need proper care," said the court to the old man, "and I will see to it that you get attention for all your wants without having to do any work."

ENTER PETITIONS TO "KILL" BOXING GAME

Two petitions were filed with the Legislature to-day which were aimed to kill boxing in Massachusetts. One of the petitions was filed by E. J. Edmans and asked that all boxing matches be prohibited in this state. The other petition was drawn up by E. C. Webster, who desires all bouts to be limited to six rounds and that no decisions be rendered in bouts that exceed four rounds in duration. It is more than likely that both of these petitions will be killed "in committee," as boxing is conducted on a very high basis in this State.

EDMANDS WILL AID RICHESON

Moses Grant Edmands has not abandoned Clarence V. T. Richeson in the fight for the commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

While he and the other members of his family do not wish to have any further direct dealings with the doomed clergyman, they are anxious to do everything in their power, as was exclusively announced in the AMERICAN a few days ago, to stand by him on the question of a modification of sentence.

Actuated solely by this motive, Mr. Edmands has authorized Attorneys Morse and Lee to wage the commutation campaign as planned, and his purse is as available as ever to further this object.

"Reports that Mr. Edmands has abandoned Mr. Richeson in disgust are not true," said Attorney William A. Morse at his office this afternoon. "You may state that Mr. Edmands has not deserted Mr. Richeson and that he is as loyal as ever."

No Further Confession.

"Richeson has never given me any explanation for his attack upon himself. I am as ignorant as ever as to his motive. I think it was committed in a religious frenzy. Mr. Richeson will never give a more detailed confession or explanation of his crime than has already been made public. That decision is final. A more detailed account could serve no useful purpose other than to feed morbid curiosity.

"I have not yet prepared the petition which we shall submit to the Governor and Council. I have decided to put that off for some days yet."

Letters Demand Death.

The Governor, the District Attorney, the members of the Executive Council, members of the Legislature, the newspapers—all are receiving letters by the hundreds, which discuss the case. And the letters unite in demanding the execution of a man whose crime is denounced as "black as that of Judas."

Here is a sample of the letters received. The following is a copy of a letter received by Edward F. Hamlin, executive secretary at the State House. The letter is addressed to the "Governor's Council." The writer lives at Bayard, Ohio.

Bayard, Ohio.

To the Governor's Council, Boston.

Gentlemen: In God's name I ask you not to interfere with the law, but let it take its course in the case of Richeson. Take it to your own home; if he had murdered one of your daughters, would you "give him time to repent?" How much time did he give that poor, innocent girl to make peace with her God?

Richeson Will Face Death.

Richeson has seemed at peace with the world, and cheerful, in spite of his desection by his friends and relatives, since his plea of guilty. Persons who have seen him daily, marvel at the change in the man. They say it would be no surprise now if he were to say that he is ready to pay the legal penalty for his crime, and give up the fight for commutation.

As one official expressed it:

"Here is a case of a man accused of murdering his innocent sweetheart after she had apparently been tricked into a mockery of a marriage by him. He has already done the two most singular things ever done by a man in his predicament. First he mutilated himself terribly just when it was thought his attorneys had a

FAVORS SUBSIDY TO OPERA HOUSE

The Boston Opera House will receive a subsidy of about $8,000 per year from the city if the bill which Mayor Fitzgerald prepared to-day for presentation to the Legislature is passed.

Since there was a question of the legality of the city exempting the taxes on the opera house the Mayor prepared the bill which provides an annual subsidy not greater than the amount of taxes levied upon the property.

BELFAST SINKS BARGE; 1 DEAD

Gustave Nelson, a seventeen-year-old deck hand on the barge Wayne, was drowned, and Henry Carlsen, captain of the barge, and Andrew Anderson, the other members of the crew, were rescued through the heroism of Charley Jackson, deck hand on the steamer, when the steamship Belfast of the Eastern Steamship Company struck and sunk the Wayne in President Roads, early to-day.

The steamer had left her dock and started for Winterport, Maine. She has Winter headquarters there. Two miles down the harbor she struck the barge.

The shock was slight to the steamer, although most of the forty passengers were awakened. A hole was stove in the side of the barge, just forward of the mainmast, and she began to sink.

Charley Johnson, a deckhand, ran down the Belfast's ladder to the barge, and along her deck to the cabin. He shouted to the members of the crew and climbed back on board the steamer.

The captain and Anderson came aboard the steamer, but Nelson did not appear. Johnson went back to the barge and hunted desperately for the lad, but without success. Supposing he had come on board the steamer he climbed back up the ladder. The Belfast backed away and the barge sank.

The Belfast then returned to her dock, where she will lie till examined by the authorities for damage. Apparently, she suffered no serious injury, except for having the paint scraped off on the starboard bow. Her cargo is being shifted to permit an examination of the interior of the hull, and it is expected that she will sail on her regular trip.

Charles Johnson, whose heroism in making two trips on the sinking barge, saved two lives, told the following story:

"I went into the cabin first and found one man had been awakened by the shock. It was the captain. He was beginning to dress in order to see what the matter was.

"We hustled around to notify the other man and boy. The boy who was lost was sleeping in the pilot house on top of the cabin. We yelled to him and he said he was all right. We took his word for it. A little while later we went to the steamer.

"We thought the boy must have got

To relieve the suffering from cold among the city's poor as much as possible, the Mayor to-day directed the Overseers of the Poor to use all the available resources of the department in fuel and warm wearing apparel to the needy. His letter follows:

Board of Overseers of the Poor,
43 Hawkins Street,
Boston, Mass.

During the present spell of cold weather, the poor of the city suffer acutely from the lack of fuel as well as of warm bedding and wearing apparel. It is my wish that you should address all the resources of your department to meeting this need. I desire that you should regard it as a matter of emergency and furnish supplies of coal and wood and other materials wherever you find that they are necessary. Death and disease result in a great many cases from the neglect of simple precaution and the exercise of common charity toward those who, through misfortune, are unable to provide adequately for themselves. Yours very truly,

JOHN F. FITZGERALD,
Mayor.

One death, countless cases of frost-bite and general suffering among the poor were Greater Boston's share to-day in the record cold wave of the Winter which has the country in its grasp.

The death was that of Gustave Nelsen, a bargeman, who was drowned in a har-

LEPER COLONY ON PENIKESE IS SWEPT BY FIRE

The buildings of the Massachusetts leper colony on Penikese Island, Buzzards Bay, were attacked by fire this afternoon.

The first news of the fire reached Boston in a dispatch via Point Judith, R. I. The wireless station on Penikese flashed a message at 1 o'clock that all the Penikese structures were being destroyed.

HELP IS CALLED BY WIRELESS MESSAGE.

Help was asked. The revenue cutter Acushnet started from New Bedford.

At the request of Mayor Ashley and Fire Chief Cahill the Times's wireless operator, Lester Jenkins, is endeavoring to get into communication with Penikese Island, and if it is found necessary the mayor and chief will send apparatus at once from this city.

The wireless call for aid was sent from Penikese by young Archie Thomas, the Upton boy, now twenty years old, who was sent there when he developed leprosy while in high school. Archie was encouraged in scientific study. The State gave him money for a wireless apparatus. This apparatus proved its value to-day.

Thirteen Lepers on Island.

There are thirteen lepers on Penikese. Four are women. Eight men and Archie Thomas, the boy, complete the members of the colony.

In charge of the leper colony is Dr. Frank E. Parker, superintendent of the island. He and Mrs. Parker live in a two-story frame house 400 yards from the lepers.

In addition to Dr. and Mrs. Parker there are five non-leprous people on Penikese. There are in all twenty people.

The leper colony was established by Massachusetts in November, 1905. Roomy, comfortable cottages were built by the Massachusetts board of charities and precautions were not only taken to protect the unfortunates from the rigors of the weather, but they were given constant medical attention.

Physician's Sacrifice.

The old Agassiz mansion, owned by Louis Agassiz, the naturalist, was turned into a hospital. Flower gardens were planted in front of the cottages and the male patients were put to work tending flocks of sheep and gardening.

Dr. Louis Edmonds of Harwich, purely for the love of scientific research, sacrificed a large practice and risked his own life that he might study leprosy. He was appointed the first superintendent of the colony. Now Dr. Parker is in charge.

The colony has been practically cut off from the outside world. A steamer drops mail and supplies there once a week. The only other communication with the outside has been through Archie Thomas's wireless outfit, which has exchanged occasional calls with passing steamers.

The island and the lepers are under control of the Massachusetts State Board of Charity. The Legislature of 1909 appropriated money for hospital cottages. Recent improvements there also include a railway 240 feet long, with a cradle for the island sailboat; completion of a bungalow, with carpenter shop, store room and three sleeping rooms, erection of a flagstaff, additions to the administration building and improvements on the barn and sheep shed.

The livestock on the island has included as many as two horses, four cows, one bull, a heifer, two calves, ninety sheep, four hogs, ten pigs, 300 hens.

Mother Went With Boy.

The case of Archie Thomas, the Upton boy at Penikese, has always been held as especially pathetic. When the authorities condemned the lad to the isolated life of a leper his mother, a widow, said she would go to Penikese to share his terrible lot. Mrs. Thomas went to Penikese with Archie. She was appointed a nurse and helper at a salary of $200. That is not a large income, but money goes far in such a restricted life as that on the lepers' isle.

The State Board of Charity in its annual report praises Mrs. Thomas, saying that her presence on Penikese is productive of much good.

GRANTS HEARING ON GARBAGE QUESTION

George W. Anderson, representing the Boston Disposal Company, the unsuccessful bidder for the garbage contract, to-day applied for a hearing before Mayor Fitzgerald. A hearing will be granted him.

FIRES CAUSED BY COLD SNAP

Many fires broke out in Greater Boston and vicinity to-day, aggravating the distress of scores of men, women and children on the coldest day of the Winter. Most of the fires were caused by efforts made by families to thaw out frozen water pipes, which was the immediate result of the bitter cold. Up to noon to-day there had been twelve fires in Greater Boston, causing losses estimated at $71,500.

Several were injured, and many more were rescued or driven to the street homeless. In Cambridge to-day there were four fires, three of them caused by attempts to heat cellar pipes. In Chelsea there were three up to noon, all caused by the use of lamps or other heating apparatus in the basements of homes. The other fires occurred in Quincy, Lynn, Brockton, Salem and Malden.

Families Driven Out.

Fire in Brockton to-day destroyed the three-family apartment house at No. 701 North Main street, that city, driving fourteen persons in the streets, with the thermometer 8 degrees below zero. Several tenants had narrow escapes for their lives. The damage was $12,000.

In Lynn twelve children belonging to three families were rescued from flames that destroyed the four-apartment house at the corner of Water Hill and Electric place, that city, with a loss of $5,000. Hydrants were thawed out by neighbors so that the firemen could secure water for fighting the blaze.

At Salem the printing plant of the Salem Dispatch, published by former Mayor Arthur Howard of that city, was destroyed by fire to-day. An explosion under one of the linotype machines was the cause.

Mother Rescues Babe.

One child was rescued by its mother and one woman was burned and cut as a result of a fire in the two-family house at No. 25 Phillips street, Malden, shortly before noon to-day. The fire started from a lamp that exploded while the tenants tried to thaw out water pipes in the basement.

Mrs. Herbert R. Kiffe, who occupies the upper floor, was injured as she tried to put out the flames. In the cellar at the time were Mrs. Kiffe, Mrs. Walter J. Roy, who lives in the first floor, and Mrs. John A. Dunn, a neighbor. Mrs. Dunn rescued John A. Dunn, Jr., eighteen months old, from the kitchen on the first floor. The damage was $1,000.

A fire thought to have been of incendiary origin drove four families scantily clad into the streets from a frame tenement owned by Lewis DeBona on Copeland street, Quincy, early to-day. The damage was $800. Neighbors furnished the tenants with blankets to keep them from freezing.

Fires in Cambridge.

Four fires, three of them caused by attempts to thaw out water pipes, caused losses amounting to $3,500 in Cambridge to-day. The most destructive blaze was at No. 385 Huron avenue, where families were driven from a two-story frame dwelling.

The other fires were at No. 18 Grove street, No. 33 Vine street and No. 27 Austin street, all in Cambridge.

Two fires in Chelsea to-day were caused by the use of heating apparatus to thaw out pipes. One caused a loss of $50 to the grocery store of Hannah Murray at No. 93 William street, Chelsea.

Still another Chelsea fire was in the house at No. 2 Auburn place, that city, which drove Mrs. Fred Volt and her nine children into the street. The loss was more than $400.

POLICE GUARD LAWRENCE MILLS

World, presided and counseled patience. Speeches were made in English, French, Belgian, Lithuanian and Italian.

The American Woolen people at noon announced that they were operating all of their mills, but considerably under capacity. It was estimated in Lawrence that about 12,000 of the 25,000 mill operatives were out. Some went back to work to-day and others quit, keeping the situation about as it was yesterday.

Shivering with the intense cold and cowed by the sight of thirty firemen lined up with lines of hose connected to the hydrants and prepared to throw heavy streams of water at the first signs of trouble, thousands of the striking mill operatives here lined up on Canal and Union streets at daylight to-day and saw the mill gates open and a few of their number go back to work.

One hundred policemen, armed with clubs and revolvers, and thirty firemen, armed, besides the lines of hose, with clubs and with automatic revolvers, waited ready for the first signs of trouble.

Few Return to Work.

The regular hour for opening the mills is 6:40. At that time, day was just beginning to break, but already crowds of strikers were hurrying to the mills. On Canal street, in front of the Washington Mills, and on Union street, near the Merrimac river, in front of the Ayer and Wood mills, thousands stood and watched the lines of policemen.

A few of the number went back to work, but most of the 12,000 who were called out, remained firm.

It was the coldest day of the year in Lawrence, with a temperature of 12 below zero.

At a mass meeting of more than a thousand of the leaders among the 15,000 mill operatives of this city it was decided to call a general strike in an endeavor to paralyze the woolen and cotton industry in Lawrence.

The entire police strength of the city was called out to guard the mill gates. This totalled 135 men, including day and night patrolmen and reserve officers. In addition, thirty members of the fire department were sworn in for police duty and given badges and revolvers.

Mayor Michael A. Scanlon and Director of Public Safety Cornelius F. Lynch were at police headquarters early to see that every precaution was taken to have a strong force of men ready to cope with any trouble that might arise. Members of the day force who had a strenuous time in yesterday's rioting, and those of the night squad who had been patrolling their beats through the zero weather, were alike lined up and given their instructions.

After being formed in squads the men marched to the gates of the Wood Worsted and Ayer and Washington mills, which were opened at 6:30. In the half light of the early morning the offices of the mills were the only scenes of activity. There, the paymasters were prepared with the employes' envelopes, to give out as the men and women passed in single file before the grated and grilled windows.

The strikers were paid off to-day. More than $150,000 was distributed. This was said to be the largest weekly wage ever paid in the Lawrence mills. The men were paid off in small squads, with the police and firemen on hand to stop any disturbance.

The operatives found in their envelopes pay for fifty-four hours' work. Before the fifty-four-hour bill went into effect their pay was at the rate of fifty-six hours per week. This is the cause of the strike. The strikers demand the same pay they received when their work was of fifty-six hours' duration. This the mill owners say they cannot afford to give.

The operatives were paid off without disturbance. About thirty per cent. of the strikers went back to work. But the majority took their envelopes in ominous silence and filed out.

The regular pay day is Friday. But yesterday's rioting prevented the paymasters of the mills from giving the operatives their weekly wages. The paymasters had all they could do to wheel large trucks containing envelopes to vaults of security in the mills when the infuriated operatives rushed by the mill watchmen and practically took possession of the mills.

Over the big mills themselves, and the mill yards, searchlights that had been utilized all night to discover possible prowlers, still cast their rays of brilliance. The mills were silent. As Saturday is a half-working day, the officials felt that after the excitement of the riot little work would be done, and the machinery will not be started.

The employes to-day found the pay for two hours' work deducted from their envelopes. This is the first pay day on which they have been hit by the manufacturers' action under the new fifty-four hour law.

While the City Government Arbitration Committee is seeking to secure a peaceful return of the thousands of employes to the mills, it admits there is little hope of success unless the mill agents decidedly modify the stand they have taken.

The leaders of the operatives were busy counselling their followers not to resort to violence. They urged them, after they received their pay envelopes, to attend the mass meeting scheduled for 8 o'clock, when the situation will be gone over.

bor collision due to the fog-like vapor which was formed on the water by the intense cold.

Chicago reports thirty cold wave deaths so far for the week, with more expected.

Five deaths are reported from points in Ohio directly due to the cold.

A ranchman at Larned, Kas., was found dead in the saddle, frozen to his frozen horse.

Boston's lowest official temperature for the day was five below from 5 to 6 a. m. The cold yielded slowly before the sun till, at noon, the official temperature reading was zero.

But much lower readings were sent in from suburban points. Medford, down in the damp valley of the Mystic River, reported as low as twelve below at 8 a. m. Everett, Malden, Melrose, Mattapan and Braintree reported ten below.

A Middleboro resident said, according to dispatches from that town, that the thermometer at his back door recorded seventeen below at 6 a. m.

The coldest spot in New England at 8 a. m., according to the official weather reports, was Greenville, Me., at 20 below. The warmest was Nantucket at 4 above. The coldest place in the United States and Canada was Stone Cliffe, Canada, at 38 below. Canton, N. Y., reported the coldest in the United States at 26 below.

New England temperatures included: Eastport, Me., 12 below; Portland, Me., 4 below; Burlington, Vt., 16 below; Northfield, Vt., 14 below.

Readings from weather stations over the country included: New York city, Washington, D. FREIGHT MEN AID IN STRIKE

One hundred and ten freight handlers, members of the Boston & Maine Freight Handlers' Assembly, struck in sympathy with the longshoremen at the Hoosac Tunnel docks to-day. The freight handlers on the Mystic docks, 250 in number, remained at work although members of the same organization.

No effort was made to call out the remainder of the 1,600 union freight handlers employed by the Boston & Maine at its Warren avenue, Rutherford avenue or East Cambridge freight sheds. The 400 Boston & Albany freight handlers, who went out at the Grand Junction docks still remain on strike.

The steamship agents have made no offer of settlement of the six-day strike to the men's union, and the 2,500 longshoremen who struck Friday of last week still remain out.

At the longshoremen's headquarters on Havre street, East Boston, and at Abbottsford Hall, City Square, Charlestown, the strikers congregate.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

JAPANESE HELD IN GIRL'S SUIT

Shiro Tabaka, the Japanese merchant who is the defendant in a $10,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Miss Helen T. Cochran, a pretty Roxbury girl, faces a long stay in the Charles street jail, according to an order rendered by Judge Pierce of the Suffolk Superior Court. Judge Pierce denied Tabaka's application for release from imprisonment on bail. At present the Superior docket is big enough to keep the court full for a year or a year and a half, it was said to-day. The effect of this may be to keep the Japanese in a prison cell until his case is reached.

The filing of the suit against Tabaka several weeks ago attracted much interest, as it was the first breach of promise case in Massachusetts in which a Japanese was named as the defendant. Miss Cochran also brought an action in tort for $5,000, which resulted in tying up the merchant's bank accounts. John J. Cochran, the girl's father, has also sued Tabaka for $10,000.

FIND NEGLECTED BOYS IN TRUNK

When the police went to the home of John Duplex, at No. 94 Tudor street, South Boston, to-day, they found five children asleep in one room. A search of the living room and kitchen which the family occupies failed to find the two youngest children, six-year-old John and four-year-old William Duplex.

The police awakened the elder children.

"Where are your little brothers?" they asked.

"We don't know," the police were told. "They went to sleep with us in the bed. Now they've gone."

Over in one corner of the barely furnished bedroom was a trunk. The lid was down. Sergeant Dennis Murphy of Station 6, with the assistance of Agent William Critcherson of the S. P. C. C., moved the trunk and lifted the top. They picked out lots of old clothing, and then came across the shivering bodies of John and William.

In the South Boston District Court Associate Justice Logan ordered the children sent to the Harrison Avenue Home for Destitute Catholic Children. The police told the court the parents of the children had been sent away and that the elder girls in the family had gone to work, but found it hard to make both ends meet.

CORBETT'S CHAT

Fitchburg Is All Right—A Well Governed, Progressive, Industrial Centre—Things Doing There Every Minute, on the Minute—Pen Pictures of Some in Business There.

LEOMINSTER NOTES—PROVIDENCE JOTTINGS

EDWIN A. CORBETT

Have you been to Fitchburg?

If not, it would pay you in more ways than one to visit this wide-awake, picturesque Massachusetts city. Better still, it is a good place to live in and to do business in. Fitchburg is clean, healthy and up-to-date. The people found in this city are of the sort one likes to get in touch with—genial, generous, honest, enterprising. In fact, the very atmosphere seems to be surcharged with a live and let-live spirit which is refreshing, and as it should be. The stores are well-stocked, neat and inviting. Its fame as an industrial centre has already gone forth. Fitchburg leads the entire world in the manufacture of revolvers, cross cut saws, screen plates and steel horse collars. It leads the United States in the manufacture of bicycles, upright boilers, machine tools and high grade machine work. It is the second city in Massachusetts in the production of paper, while it leads all cities of its size in the United States in the application of electric power to machinery.

Fitchburg makes good!

A MAYOR WORTH WHILE.

Hon. F. O. Hardy, mayor, was born and educated in this city, and believes first and always in Fitchburg and her people, bar none. And the citizens point with pride to their chief executive as one who is capable, progressive, practical and public-spirited—a clear case of reciprocity. Personally, Mayor Hardy is the sort of young man one likes to meet—one of fine physique, pleasing personality and gracious manners. Besides being mayor, his honor is treasurer of the William A. Hardy Sons Co., brass founders, who commenced business in 1850.

Walter A. Davis, city clerk, has held his position a quarter of a century, and his friends are legion. Mr. Davis was born in Fitchburg in 1846, and has lived in that city most of the time. He is a graduate of Williams College and is prominently identified with the Masons and Odd Fellows; and is also a member of the Merchants' Association. He is congenial, public-spirited and efficient—the right man for his important position. His father was mayor for 5 years, 1883-5.

"A LIVE WIRE."

The Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association are always boosting this city. Ernest L. Waitt, industrial secretary, gentlemanly, friendly, with plenty of ginger, the I-am-with-you spirit, the breezy manner of a Westerner, and optimism to let, is doing grand things for Fitchburg.

GIVES GOOD SERVICE.

The Fitchburg & Leominster Street Railway Company was organized in 1886 as the Fitchburg Street Railway Co. Branch lines were built from time to time, and in 1892 were extended to the town of Leominster and the business was consolidated with the local line in that town, which was built from Leominster to North Leominster in 1891, under the name which the local company operates to-day. In 1893 the line was extended from Fitchburg Park to Whalom, and from Whalom to North Leominster, and the same year saw the lines all electrified and horse cars a thing of the past. The Fitchburg & Leominster Street Railway Co. is to-day one of the best equipped and most progressive street railway companies in the United States. This company owned and operated the first vestibuled closed car in New England, also owned and operated the first semi-convertible car in New England. This company began the operation of pay-as-you-enter cars last month. This company owns beautiful Whalom Park. This company is controlled by local capital entirely. The company's bonds are dealt in by savings institutions, and are a legal investment. The management is able, enterprising, just. The present officials comprise, Wesley W. Sargent, president; H. I. Wallace, vice-president; R. N. Wallace, treasurer.

The Fitchburg Automobile Company has every facility for the care of autos at their well-favored garage, having ample accommodations for some 35 cars. P. F. Connors, the manager, was among the first to direct his attention to the repair and care of automobiles, and is a good man to do business with. Gasoline, oils and supplies.

Rublee, the optician, known far and near, has been in his present establishment sixteen years, deals in optical goods and makes a feature of prescription work, and guarantees satisfaction.

The Goodrich Clothing Company, 56 years in business here, has an enviable record, now belongs to the Besse Syndicate, carries a very select stock, including fine furs. Manager Alley is well qualified for his position.

C. P. Dickinson manufactures leather tips for ladies' shoes—an important industry—and is meeting with his full share of prosperity, which he justly deserves, as he is a man of ability and pleasing address.

A GROWING COMPANY.

The Fitchburg Gas & Electric Light Company is a typical Fitchburg institution interested in Fitchburg business and affairs. The officers are Clifton R. Hayes, manager; Palmer York, treasurer; and G. W. Stiles, superintendent. This company was organized in 1852 under the name of "Fitchburg Gas Co." An electric light plant was built and name changed as at present, December 5, 1895. The present officers and directors were elected January 30, 1909. The last report of the former management showed 3,703 gas customers and 601 electric customers. To-day this company has 5,576 gas and 1,252 electric customers, an increase of 50 per cent. in 3 years. Other comparisons during the same period show additions and marked improvements. This company has an absolutely modern electric plant, having just completed an expenditure of $15,000 for a new switchboard and $167,000 for its underground system. It is just finishing work upon the most modern coal gas plant in America.

The G. M. Parks Company, piping engineers and contractors, in 1911 did 6 times as much business as was done in 1898, some 600 per cent. increase because they satisfy. They have a staff of 13 competent engineers. They sell brains and engineering. They have the ability to save steam and money for mill men—or make it go farther. One New England mill saved a battery of 8 boilers. Ten thousand dollars is saved each year. Just send for "Parks' Piping Parables."

A SOLID INSTITUTION.

The business public and others are accorded every accommodation and convenience at the Safety Fund National Bank—a roll of honor bank—which acts as depository of the United States and Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Organized in 1874, this bank's steady progress has been remarkable. By way of comparison, its resources as per statement of condition last September, were $1,731,339.58, which compared with last month's report, $2,461,696.95, speaks for itself. Elmer A. Onthank, president, was formerly connected with the Old Blackstone National Bank of Boston. Samuel H. Lowe is the capable cashier.

ONE OF THE FINEST.

If you stop at the Johnsonia you get the best. W. E. Forbes, the capable manager, an experienced hotel man, would not have it otherwise. For one thing, Mr. Forbes attends to the marketing himself and they cannot fool him on good cuts of meat. He caters to the best people, and he sees to it that his guests get excellent food, comfortable rooms and good service generally. Mr. Forbes began hotel work in 1877 at Nantasket Beach; then was in White Mountains, Boston, Florida and elsewhere, making friends all the time.

When it comes to reliable clothing and shoes the F. H. Lane Company are right there with the goods for men and boys. The custom department is right up to the minute. This reliable establishment has been in its present location since 1902, and by giving satisfaction in every respect has built up a good business.

The Wachusett Cab & Auto Company gives first class service, day or night, which is appreciated by the public. Myron W. Sarsfield, manager, is also representative for the Stoddard-Dayton and Ford cars. Auto supplies are furnished and repairs are promptly attended to. Mr. Sarsfield is a hustler.

IT'S ALL RIGHT.

H. W. Page, manager of the Bon-Ton Restaurant is doing business and lots of it, all of which he richly merits. He serves patrons with the best the market affords. Cleanliness predominates, and in his well-equipped kitchen is one of the largest gas ranges in New England. His chefs were formerly in the employ of big hotels. Mr. Page is a native of Fitchburg, is cordial, enterprising, and makes friends readily.

Lewis O. West, wholesale newsdealer, attends right to business in handling the New York, Boston and local newspapers. He is enterprising, reliable, tactful—the sort of man one likes to meet in trade circles.

They do things at the Fitchburg Public Market. They buy flour by the car-load. They have already sold 6 tons of turkeys. They have their own cold storage plant. Their new building is all right. They believe in honest measure, square dealing. Public responds to about $120,000 a year. "There's a reason." C. H. Watson holds the managerial reins. "Nuff ced."

ELEGANT DEPARTMENT STORE.

The Chamberlain-Huntress Co., the specialty mail order house, commenced here with floor space of 3,000 square feet; to-day occupy 12,000 square feet, employ 50 hands, and make a feature of rugs, draperies, lace curtains, clothing, fancy dry goods, etc. C. W. Starkey and J. M. Hubbard are resident owners and sole managers, and they know their business from A to Z. No wonder they have a fine trade!

BENEFIT THE PEOPLE.

The Fitchburg Co-operative Bank, incorporated in 1877, offers inducements for all who desire to save money or to get out of debt, and has proved a real boon to many. This bank has made a thousand different loans in this section. W. M. Allen, secretary and treasurer, will take pleasure in conferring with those who may be interested in this institution's co-operative plan.

The Fidelity Co-operative Bank has been a great benefit to many people in Fitchburg. This bank was incorporated in 1888, has an authorized capital of $2,000,000, and assets of over $1,000,000. Its operative plans appeal alike to depositor and borrower, and those of moderate salaries, particularly, should avail themselves of the advantages of same. Samuel L. Graves is president, W. G. Hayes is secretary and treasurer.

GOOD INSURANCE.

Will E. Ayer is the district manager of the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia, and his business extends from Fitchburg to Greenfield, Mass. It is generally conceded throughout the country that this solid company sells life insurance at the lowest cost, with the gratifying result—doing a big business. During his sojourn in Fitchburg, something over 2 years, Manager Ayer has made many friends, as might be expected.

The Fitchburg Paper Co. gives employment to 200 hands, and is an industry with which Fitchburg's most noted family—the Wallaces—has long been connected. Hon. Rodney Wallace, the founder, died February 27, 1903. Since then his sons, Herbert I. Wallace and Col. George R. Wallace, have been sole proprietors.

CHOICE GROCERIES.

All that may be desired in the way of substantial and fancy groceries may be had at George A. Mayberry & Co.'s reliable store, which is frequently termed the "S. S. Pierce of Fitchburg." Fresh goods, low prices, prompt delivery, courteous treatment are strong features here.

The Cold-Blast Market Co., Inc., George H. Randall, president and treasurer, has always on hand a choice stock of meats and vegetables, butter, eggs, etc., the very best the market affords, and prices are such that you do not need a step-ladder to reach them. Mr. Randall has been in business some 40 years, the last 18 years at his present location.

All that is new, chic, artistic and serviceable in the way of millinery may be procured at Miss B. M. Kendall's parlors. Miss Kendall caters to a select clientele who appreciate good quality and exclusive patterns and novelties. Many of the beautiful hats worn by ladies of refinement in this section come from this fashionable millinery establishment.

ONE OF THE BEST.

Ford & Lyon have one of the largest and best equipped garages in New England. Their 2-story building is 128x226 feet, and can accommodate 150 cars. They are local representatives for the Rambler, also the Maxwell motor cars, and carry a general line of auto supplies. Sixteen men are employed by the firm. E. C. Ford, proprietor, commenced in a small way and is entitled to much credit for what he has accomplished. He has demonstrated that perseverance coupled with integrity and square dealing in catering to the public will win out.

Over 40 years ago the drug store conducted by E. O. Earls, the "up-town druggist," was established. Under present management 7 years and still growing in popularity. "Get it at Earl's."

Percy H. Safford, the jeweler, has been doing business at his present location over 12 years, selling reliable goods, doing repair work and making friends right along.

POPULAR WITH TRAVELING MEN.

Things are in apple pie order at the American House. W. C. Hamilton takes good care of his guests, and they come back. He is also proprietor of the Bay State House, Worcester.

John L. Bailey, wholesale and retail dealer in confectionery, has demonstrated during the five years here that he fully knows his business. His father, John B. Bailey, was the well-known candy maker of Boston.

Mrs. John B. Fellows carries a fine line of corsets, lingerie and neckwear, which are bound to interest the fair sex, as the stock embraces all that is new and desirable.

W. E. Putney, insurance agent, has occupied his present office some 23 years, and has built up a fine business, which he certainly merits. He represents many of the strongest companies in the world.

ARTISTIC WALL PAPER.

Wall paper? Listen: B. A. Cook & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in foreign and domestic wall papers, have money tied up in samples than many an ordinary dealer in wall paper has in his whole store. This firm has been doing business in Fitchburg for 20 years, has agents all over New England, fills orders promptly, and gives perfect satisfaction to patrons. Parker, Bateman & Chase, civil engineers, make a specialty of dams, water works, etc. This firm has been established 25 years, and also has offices in Clinton and Ayer. Mrs. Charles Arthur White, who conducts the Sawyer Millinery Store, carries a fine line of millinery, combs and hair goods. Prices are within reach of all, and satisfaction is assured. Miss E. M. Cunningham, the ladies' hatter, may be relied upon for all that is late and novel in the way of headgear for the fair sex. Her trade is the best. Snow & McDermott's best advertisement is their best work in crayon and photography at popular prices. Their establishment is fully equipped with modern facilities. Been here since 1889, and enjoy public confidence. Tower & Willard's hack, boarding and livery stable is the largest in the city, and contains some 90 horses. Competent help employed. Handsome hacks and carriages. Also, bargains in horses always. The Royal Confectionery Co. deal in fine chocolates and pure candy, and make a feature of ice cream. E. M. Read Company, manufacturers, have a tempting display of goods, including Magnolia, Zephyr, Mignonette and Avon chocolates. Their Magnolia milk chocolates, assorted flavors, are of a superior quality. L. E. Hall, proprietor of Hall's Lunch and News Room, is looking after patrons' interests, both in the way of good food and late news. He also has a centrally-located store at Leominster. The Fitchburg Dry Goods Co. is pushing right to the front. This store was recently enlarged and is now double its former size, and carries a complete, attractive assortment of dry goods. Expert watchmakers and jewelers are employed at S. M. Nathan's store. Optical work also a feature. F. X. Gagnon is manager. The Bruce-Hibbard Electric Co., engineers and contractors, carry a good line of electrical goods, and are prepared to fill orders promptly, accurately and on equitable terms. Bear this in mind. W. C. Frear is local manager of the F. W. Woolworth & Co.'s five and ten-cent store in this city. Mr. Frear has been here five years and he is a "live wire," so to speak. C. A. Lesure, the florist and decorator, guarantees modern service at moderate prices. One of the best-known firms is that of Oran S. Rice & Co., watchmakers and jewelers, who carry a complete line of goods, including diamonds, cut glass goods, etc. Fred W. Rice is always on deck. J. C. Quellette, proprietor of the Primeau Pharmacy, bought out his former employer in 1900, and made decided improvements. He has a complete stock of drugs, toilet articles, etc. Two registered pharmacists. Lesure Bros., proprietors of the Palace Steam Laundry, modern and well-equipped for fine work, are adding a new 3-story building. This laundry took over the Star Laundry in 1906. For business or pleasure, in the city or out, get in touch with O. E. Bickford for taxicabs, automobiles or hacks. He "gets there" promptly and at moderate rates. Horses sold or exchanged at his livery. Of course you eat, but do you want pure food, home cooking, and quick service at popular prices? Then visit the Fitchburg Lunch. Proprietor H. F. C. Merriam fed 800 one day.

A. O. Michon, photographer, does good workmanship in high-grade photos, also crayons, sepia, water colors and oil paintings. He carries a choice line of novelty frames, and makes a specialty of amateur work. The Park Building Cafe, for both ladies and gentlemen, is inviting and homelike. Good food is served at reasonable prices. C. M. Flint & Co., are experienced and popular caterers. The feminine heart is always interested in costumes, rich dresses and made-to-order shirt waists—Madame Lozelle, dressmaker, appreciates this fact, and acts accordingly. In busy season she employs 16 assistants. Over 18 years Margaret Rock has been in business here. Hair goods, hair dressing, manicure work, etc., are her specialties. B. A. Boivin, practical watchmaker, jeweler and optician, makes a specialty of watch repairing. He has had 25 years' experience. J. A. Hills, manufacturer of candies and ice cream, uses 40 per cent. fat cream in making his delicious ice cream. Gathercole & Stearman, optometrists, reliable and experienced, give each customer that personal attention which means satisfactory results. Soderstrom & Heikkinen, proprietors of the popular Park Pharmacy, have built up a good patronage in the last seven years. Harry Aitchison, carriage trimmer and harness maker, has been doing business in his present store 27 years.

SOUTH FITCHBURG.

Shirreff's Worsted Mills at South Fitchburg, under the experienced direction of John Shirreff, are manufacturing some of the finest quality of woolen goods turned out in this country. This plant is equipped with modern machinery and apparatus and appliances, employs skilled workmen, and its fabrics are in constant demand by the trade.

LEOMINSTER NOTES.

This is somewhat of an exclusive manufacturing community, yet abounds with good homes and thrifty people. Robert L. Carter, town clerk, treasurer and collector of Leominster, has held these offices nine years to the satisfaction of his constituents and the public generally. Mr. Carter is courteous, accommodating, careful, efficient, and the town's records and finances are in first-class condition. He makes friends readily and is highly esteemed.

The Leominster Gas Light Company, and Leominster Electric Light and Power Company, are two operating companies of the Massachusetts Lighting Companies. These companies have rebuilt their plants, installing new machinery, and are in first-class condition. Their output in five years has doubled, which speaks volumes as to excellent management. Alfred Clarke is president of all operating companies in New England under this system.

The Merchants National Bank commenced business here last October, and is meeting with deserved success. Its resources are already nearly $500,000. Alfred N. Litch is president, Charles H. Howe, vice-president, and Fred F. Blaisdell, cashier. William A. Putnam's old-established insurance agency places risks in strong companies at minimum cost, and settles losses satisfactorily.

Those who may wish to engage the services of architects for high-class work will do well to get in touch with Lent & Burr, who are pleasantly located in the Mayo building.

The boarding and livery stables managed by F. E. Nichols are first class in every particular. Horses receive the best of care, and his livery teams are available on reasonable terms. Mr. Nichols also deals in horses, carriages, harnesses, etc., and offers bargains.

The millinery store conducted by Mrs. M. E. Bowen was established 75 years ago, and has been under the present management 10 years, carries a choice stock, and has built up good trade.

The Hotel Leominster is a good $2-a-day house. G. G. Jennison is the genial proprietor.

DON'T MISS IT!

Concerning the special dissolution sale (clothing stock of S. Bergson & Co.), which is now on at Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner of Hanover and Portland streets, a word to the wise ought to be sufficient; in view of the many bargains offered, this big establishment should be one of the busiest places in Boston to-day.

PROVIDENCE JOTTINGS.

Cherry & Webb, dealers in ladies', misses' and children's outer wearing apparel, commenced business on Westminster street in 1904 with a store front of 17 feet and 100 feet deep. To-day this firm's handsome establishment occupies four floors, and has a frontage of 75 feet, affording a window display, which for artistic showing of elegant garments is a revelation to the people of Providence, and calls forth much favorable comment. Their new "Fashion's Basement" is proving a veritable Mecca for the ladies. But do not for a moment think that the house of Cherry & Webb is confined to this city; they have branch stores elsewhere in New England, employing in all a selling and alteration force of 540 men and women, with 12 buyers kept busy in the fashion markets. In Brockton they do business as Storey & Co.; Lowell, the New York Cloak & Suit Co.; New Bedford, Cherry & Co.; Fall River, the New York Cloak & Suit Co., and H. H. Hunter is manager of their Lawrence store.

Do you think of purchasing an automobile? Then, by all means, get a Ford. Why? Because no such word as "risk" or "chance" can be applied or can be used when you buy a Ford car. You are buying an impregnable surety—an automobile that will serve you and your family—serve your pleasures and your business to the fullest extent with a price you can well afford to pay, and with the assurance that the maintenance of your car will not prove a burden to you. The Ford is sold at one price, for there is no sliding scale of prices in the Ford selling organization. Dutee W. Flint, the energetic representative in Providence disposed of 588 Ford cars in 1911. Mr. Flint has ordered 1,100 of these autos to be delivered the present year, and thus early has already sold 120 of them.

E. Mitenius, general manager of the E. Mitenius Sign Co., is turning out some very creditable work in the way of business and advertising signs of every description. He makes a specialty of electric display and automatic operating signs, clear, novel and attractive. Mr. Mitenius has had a wide experience and is an artist-sign painter of marked ability.

Miss Margaret E. Rooney, the expert scalp specialist, has had a wide experience and is highly commended. Special attention is given to shampooing and facial massage. Appointments may be made by 'phone.

At Miss Margaret F. Mulvey's well-appointed millinery parlors may always be found all that is new and attractive in the way of French patterns and New York models; and prices are moderate.

Absolutely pure milk is furnished by the Providence Dairy Company, retailing 3,200 quarts daily, supplying among others the Rhode Island, St. Joseph's and City Hospitals. This company has expended $80,000 for a Pasteurization plant, which system, by the way, goes way beyond the requirements of the pure food law. S. F. Darling is manager of this up-to-date milk establishment, conducted along sanitary and scientific lines.

E. A. CORBETT.

ONE DAY MILLIONAIRE "BURNS UP" HIS CASH

McDevitt, Wilkes-Barre Man, Does Things in Style on Visit to New York.

Keeps His Valet, Secretary and Physician Very Busy and Takes a Perfumed Bath.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Apologizing for the absence of silk pajamas, John Jay McDevitt, the Wilkesbarre (Pa.) man who is seeing New York on the millionaire plan so long as his "pile" lasts, allowed himself to be interviewed by reporters at the Waldorf-Astoria to-day.

McDevitt, determined to live like a millionaire, for a day at least, arrived in New York on a special train, accompanied by Dr. E. A. Sweeney, his physician, and "Smoke," his colored valet. They paraded along the great White Way and tried to make all of the white lights turn red.

As millionaires should, McDevitt did not arise until 11 o'clock to-day. That is, he did not officially wake up. He said he would not arise until this afternoon. He sat up in bed at 11 o'clock.

He was awakened before that by numerous telephone calls, but ignored them all until about 10:30.

"I've had enough of being a millionaire," said McDevitt, as the reporters filed into his bedroom. The "Millionaire's" clothing had been deposited in many unseemly places about the room on the night before, but McDevitt did not mind.

"Yes," said the millionaire," as he passed his hand over his brow and brushed back his tangled hair. "I'm sick of this millionaire life. I'm broke besides."

Borrows $100 from "Doc."

The Wilkesbarre man explained that he had been forced to borrow $100 from Dr. Sweeney on the previous evening in order to pay his wine bill at a Broadway restaurant.

"I had five waiters serving me champagne," said McDevitt. "I don't drink it myself, but I bought it. Other people drank it for me.

"How much have you left in cash?" was asked. McDevitt smiled.

"About $14, or $13," he said. "But that's all right as I'm going to borrow another hundred from Doc."

McDevitt explainde that Doc occupied the next room but was ill as the result of the previous night's celebration and would not see callers.

"He has never been in training for a millionaire's life," laughed the Wilkes-Barre "Millionaire," "neither have I for that matter, but I stand it better."

"I hope you will pardon me, gentlemen, for not wearing silk pajamas, but I neglected to buy them. All millionaires wear them I believe."

McDevitt rang a bell and ordered an imported ginger ale. He also requested a manicurist and chiropodist be sent to him and arranged for a hot bath and rubbers.

On a table in the room were hundreds of letters from many chorus girls who wanted to aid McDevitt in being a millionaire for a day, cranks, who wanted to show him how to spend his $1,500, and offers from theatrical managers. McDevitt, however, said he did not propose to commercialize his experiment, and would not accept any theatrical or vaudeville offers.

Millionaire for a Day.

Mr. McDevitt, as has been told, came to a decision a few days ago to get all the fun he could out of a balance of about $1,500 left from $2,500 he recently received more or less unexpectedly.

"I will live like a millionaire at least for a day," he declared, and all Wilkes-Barre, knowing McDevitt as the rest of the world did not, sat up and took notice, for be it known that in that enterprising Pennsylvania town McDevitt's name is a household word. His doings, movings about, political activities and, beyond all else, his witticisms, have long furnished food for entertainment and amusement and, some say, education.

What would you do first if you planned to live like a twentieth century millionaire on $1,500? But never mind. Here is the way the McDevitt plan worked:

He arose at noon on the first day of his experiment. At great expense and trouble he had secured the services of a colored valet. "I did not ask his name," said the experimenter, "but told him I would call him 'Smoke.' His instructions were that whenever I called his name he was to appear promptly with a dollar perfecto. If I didn't want the cigar, then I wanted him and he was to keep the cigar. Thus I avoided insulting him and made him useful, besides giving him a short name."

A perfumed bath was ready for him and the valet then rubbed him down. "It was very good," said McDevitt, "because you see 'Smoke' was formerly employed at rubbing pool tables and he had the requisite strength. No Swedish massage for mine after this."

Before leaving he dined in the grill of the best hotel in Wilkes-Barre on Trinidad grape fruit, Louisiana cherries and Georgia shad roe (McDevitt is Irish, he declares), with potatoes au Gratin and black Turkish coffee.

A score of reporters from New York, Philadelphia and other cities who had come to hear of his wonderful plan clamored for an interview at the breakfast hour, but they were firmly held aloof. "I am very early as it is," said McDevitt. "Really, I should not have had to arise before 3 o'clock this afternoon, but even millionaires, I understand, have to keep train times in mind. Come to my train and ride a ways with me, and I may talk to you if I am in the humor.

Goes to Train in an Auto.

At 1:15 a huge touring car, with a limousine body, drew up at the door of the hotel, which is only a block from the station, and after he had tipped the waiters $2 each and the coat-boy a dollar, and distributed largess to the housemaids, who had lined up in Indian gauntlet fashion to see him off, the man of wealth was escorted to the automobile by his secretary, John Lenahan—who will return as assistant manager of a hotel when the experiment is over. From the pocket of his big coat McDevitt drew a handful of nickels as he made his exit, and these he tossed to the crowd, which blocked the street. The ride to the station took less than a minute. The platforms were crowded with citizens of Wilkesbarre, who, knowing McDevitt, looked for something worth while. They were not disappointed.

With the assistance of the reporters and his secretary and valet, McDevitt gained a position on a window sill of the station, and in answer to the demands made a speech. He said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I am about to spend every cent I own on an experiment. I am going to spend it to boom this infernal town. It needs it and I have long recognized that it needed it. Of course, I have no other ideas. I am certainly going to try to enjoy myself while I am doing this. I am going to New York, the greatest city in the world, in the palatial special train which I have engaged and which you now see approaching, drawn by yon huge mogul locomotive. When I get to New York I expect to meet all the celebrities of this and perhaps other countries, though I want to say that if I saw the King of England I would cut him dead. I am not sure about Emperor William. While I am in New York I expect to make one of the best speeches I ever heard. I intend, anyhow, to put this blamed old burg on the map. I guess it's there now, what do you say?"

Cheers Greet His Departure.

Loud cheers and shouts of laughter greeted this, and everybody there yelled with glee. McDevitt was undoubtedly their pride and joy. They gave him a send-off the like of which Wilkes-Barre has not seen since William Jennings Bryan visited the place in his first campaign.

The crowd was so thick McDevitt had to be carried through it on the shoulders of the reporters. As he thus progressed triumphantly, he cast on all sides the nickels. Every boy knew him and called to him to remember him. "Give us a souvenir, Mac," they cried until the imaginary millionaire had to borrow change from the newspaper men.

From the back of the Pullman, which was the last of the three cars that made up the special, McDevitt made a peroration to his speech of farewell. He has a good voice and is a ready talker, as the later events of the day proved. "Good-by," he said, "and take care of the old folks until I return. I may come back on a hand car, but I'll be back, all right."

Pressed to tell what he was really worth, McDevitt said he had told everything except that Albert Lewis, a big lumber man, had once given him a mountain. "I own it yet, I believe," he said, "but there's nothing on it but scrub timber. Any time you feel like loafing round on a mountain I will give my permission. There is nothing mean about me. I never got any tax bill on that property. When I do I guess I'll be arrested."

This broke the conversational ice, and McDevitt for two hours or more rolled off stories—mostly based upon personal experiences that have made him famous in the Wyoming and Lackawanna valleys.

Reports Social Affair.

"I have been a little of everything," he said, "in my time, from milkman to hobo, and once I was a reporter. Only once. I was a real reporter, attached to a Wilkes-Barre paper, for three days. I noticed they had it four days, but that's an exaggeration. I was sent to cover a social affair over at the Westmoreland Club. It was a ball. I saw a lot of people I knew a lot about and a lot of gowns I thought were interesting. My mother always taught me to tell the truth, and I did so when I came to write up that ball. Next day when I saw the stuff in print I realized there was something wrong and I went on a little trip. The proprietor of the paper wanted to discharge me, but he couldn't find me so he had a long line inserted on the first page of the paper. It read 'McDevitt, you are fired,' and then his name was signed underneath in smaller type. It was very discouraging."

After this experience in journalistic endeavor McDevitt said he decided to become an editor himself, and since then he has published from time to time a pamphlet which is called "McDevitt's Scrap Book." Its candid and outspoken pages are the delight and likewise the terror of Wilkesbarreans, who look forward with mingled hope and fear to its appearance. He cals it a tri-monthly. "It would better be called a try-monthly," he declared. Some of the paragraphs from the current issue of the Scrap Book will be given in this article.

"I was a candidate for nomination for county treasurer," said the owner of the special train. My opponent was a man named Coon. I could not afford to have much campaign stuff printed and he could. I got some of his cards and went to parts of the town where they did not know me. I would enter a saloon and hand out Coon's cards to the men standing at the bar, without saying anything. They looked at the cards and then at me, supposing, of course, that I was the candidate. Then I would order one glass of beer for myself and walk out. They thought Coon was a mighty mean man."

"Speaking of politics, I know an Irishman in my district once where they had something like 314 registered voters. A leader asked him how much of a majority he could deliver and he said: 'Oh, about 600.'

"A reformer suggested to me that there was a good deal of corruption in our place. I told him I thought not, but that there might be some crookedness. He asked me what was the difference. I said: 'Well, if the Irish do the Germans, that would be corruption, but if the Irish do the Irish, well, there might be some crookedness there, but I'd hardly call it corruption.'

"My father always claimed to be a great fighting man, and he never got tired telling my mother about it. One day she said to him, 'Did ye ever lick Sullivan?' My father looked at her fierce-like and replied to her: 'I can tell you this, that the time Sullivan was advertising an offer of a thousand dollars for anyone that could lick him he came down this way and I noticed he skipped Wilkesbarre.'"

"I don't care for money," said McDevitt. "This present thing is just a freak. I think the average man ought to think more of charity and less of spending. Before you buy that drink stop and think how happy the money would make that newsboy at the door—or his mother.

"I know I am not this minute practising very well as I preach, but I usually do. I have my own idea of religion. I get to church at least once a year, but I don't think the right sort of man needs to go between four particular walls to make his peace or show his reverence. I don't, for one. I am all right morally, and I know it."

Is Against Woman Suffrage.

"I don't believe in woman suffrage—not for the sort of women I've met, any way. My ideas are old-fashioned. I think women ought to think more of being good mothers, like the old-fashioned Irishwomen. Look at the men they've raised."

As he talked along this line McDevitt fondled a long box, which he was now urged to open. It contained a big bunch of roses, and he admitted that his "girl" had given it to him. He did not lose sight of it, and had the bunch with him when he left the train.

"She was at the station," he said, "but you chaps didn't see her. Her name's Mary—that's all you'll get from me, and she is the real thing. She told me if I had made up my mind to do this thing I must do it right; so here I am. Some women are different.

"I would like to see if I can't get a Carnegie medal for a relative of mine. He has lived with his wife for five years, and anyone who knows her temper will tell you the medal is coming to him."

No real millionaire ever entertained his guests on a long railroad ride in a special train better than did McDevitt.

Just before the train reached Jersey City he gave an imitation of William Jennings Bryan's "Cross of Gold and Crown of Thorns" speech. With twinkling eyes he remarked that he himself had suggested this to Bryan and for that reason he remembered it.

HAVE THE FOOD BROUGHT STRAIGHT TO YOUR DINING ROOM ON A RAILROAD TRAIN. And don't say it cannot be done, for it is being done every day in the homes of suburban Paris. M. Henri Rigaud, the electrical engineer, began it. M. Rigaud built the railroad from the kitchen. Then he dismissed a housemaid, reducing his household expenses. He presses a button and poof! in comes the railroad train with things to eat. Read about it and see the pictures, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

'I'M SANE NOW,' DECLARES THAW

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Harry K. Thaw who was acquitted of the murder of Stanford White four years ago on the ground of insanity, in an interview yesterday declared that he was well, physically and mentally; that he was not suffering from any insane delusion or hallucinations. "I am perfectly harmless," he said.

Thaw is much stouter than he ever was, his complexion is rosy, his eyes are clear and have lost the peculiar rolling effect they had when he was on trial in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. He said he weighed about 185 pounds. His hair is thick, but is becoming gray, especially on the sides. He wears gold-rimmed spectacles. Dressed in a black and gray mixed suit, he wore a large turn-down collar and a plain four-in-hand necktie.

His Going to Matteawan.

Thaw was asked how he came to be sent to Matteawan.

"Most people seem to be making mistakes about me all the time," he said. "They say I was sent here after conviction. Not at all. I have to thank Mr. Jerome for my acquittal. You know the verdict of the jury in my second trial was that I was not guilty, on the ground of insanity, and after that the Justice sent me to Matteawan, and I have been here ever since.

"Of course, I would like to gain my freedom. Why shouldn't I? I am not a sick man, neither am I suffering from any insane delusion or hallucinations, or anything else the experts talk about."

"Don't you think it is natural for me to want to be free? They say—that is, Dr. Flint says, and he seems to be the one who is doing all the talking just now; why, I have been unable to ascertain—I am suffering from paranoia. I know I am not. Thank God, there is nothing the matter with me to-day. I am in fine shape physically. Of course, everybody naturally improves more rapidly when liberated. I think I ought to be free, and all I want is an opportunity to prove to a court and jury of unbiased and fair-minded men that I am sane.

Square Deal Is All He Asks.

"I am willing to subject myself to any kind of a test because I have absolutely no fear of the outcome. All I want and all I ask for is that I be given a fair chance, one to which everybody is entitled.

"Don't deal with me in any manner different than you would with a person whose case has nota attracted the awful notoriety mine has. If I can have such a chance, a square deal, I shall welcome it and I know just what the result should be and will be."

"What are you going to do when you win your liberty?" asked the reporter.

Thaw's eyes lighted up at the word "liberty," and he earnestly replied:

"I am going home to Pittsburg with my mother, straighten out my business affairs and then we shall go abroad for a couple of years' of rest and travel. Then I shall return to Pittsburg and go to work.

"One thing seems plain to me; if I am sane I ought not to be here. I was not sent here for punishment. I was acquitted on my trial and I cannot believe there is any public sentiment in favor of keeping a sane man in an insane asylum—the cruelest kind of punishment that the human mind could devise.

"Step over to this barred window," said Thaw to the reporter. "You ask me why I want to be free. There is my answer.

Points Out His Mother's Cottage.

Thaw was pointing to the snow covered valley below. Lights were gleaming in the village.

"You see that white cottage?" asked Thaw. "That is why I want to be free. Under that roof there lives the best friend I have on earth. For four long, long years my mother has lived there. She has forsaken everybody, all her pleasures. She has given up her beautiful Summer and Winter homes, society, everything except her charities because she wants to be near me. She has come to see me whenever permitted in all kinds of weather. Such devotion as this you can find nowhere else.

"I want to repay her for her devotion. She is getting very old. I want to spend the remainder of her days with her, and be some comfort to her in her old age.

There were tears in Thaw's eyes.

EARLE ACCUSES MRS. DURLAND

The creditors of Mrs. Kellogg Durland, widow of the author who came to his death mysteriously in Boston some weeks ago, have filed with Justice Carpenter at Monroe, N. Y., additional affidavits concerning the financial circumstances of Mrs. Durland and her husband.

Ferdinand Pinney Earle, whose castle at Monroe was rented by the Durlands, declares that Mrs. Durland tried in every way to conceal their identity from the creditors, and to this end resorted to many tricks, one of which was a pretense that the name was Deland.

Mrs. Durland, according to Earle, rented the premises on February 22, 1911, and after some argument with Earle arranged to be inventoried as Mrs. Harry K. Deland instead of Mrs. Kellogg Durland. Earle flatly refused, he says, to permit her to do so.

Earle tells of Mrs. Durland's efforts to buy a neighboring property. She did not have the necessary cash for the first payment, and induced him, he says, to indorse a check she had drawn covering the amount. The check came back marked "no funds," and she induced him, he says, to indorse a check she had drawn covering the amount. The check came back marked "no funds," and according to Earle, a considerable time elapsed before he was able to collect from Mrs. Durland the amount of the check for which he had been held responsible.

Earle tells of various extravagances by which the Durlands posed as wealthy people, though not paying the bills. When Earle and his latest wife returned from Europe in September, 1911, and sought admission to their own home, Mrs. Durland, according to Earle's affidavit, took the position that the house was hers and that the Earles had no right therein. Rent was owing at the time, and when Earle made an indignant protest, which reached the newspapers, against the highhandedness of the Durlands, Mrs. Durland wrtoe him a letter dated October 2, 1911, in which she said:

"I am making almost superhuman efforts to get a little shack of my own. The first payment is the only thing that stands in my way. Every creditor we ever had has found out our whereabouts through (Sic) that unfortunate newspaper business, and I was in New York all last week trying to propitiate them."

MEDICAL MEN APPROVE THIS PRESCRIPTION
Free from Drugs and Opiates Cures a Cold Overnight

The opposition of the medical profession to "patent medicines" is based upon considerations of simple honesty and morality. A physician's prescription is a matter of record. It can be referred to at any time, and its ingredients can be known to the patient. But the patent medicine manufacturer keeps his formula secret, and too often makes it a means of distributing dangerous opiates and drgus.

Every doctor knows the curative properties of virgin oil of pine. Most of them use it in their daily practice. One of the most reliable and quick-acting prescriptions for the cure of colds, sore throat, inflammations of the mucous membrane, bronchitis, catarrh and rheumatism due to excess of uric acid, is made by mixing two ounces of glycerine with eight ounces pure whiskey and a half ounce of virgin oil of pine. A teaspoonful every four hours will cure any cold that is curable.

Your druggist can furnish these ingredients at small cost and you can mix them at home. Virgin oil of pine should always be secured in the original half-ounce vials bearing the label of the Leach Chemical Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, as this is the only form in which your druggist and physician can be certain of its purity and freshness.

RHEUMATISM
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatism trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. If after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write to-day.

RICHESON JURY OF CLERGYMEN

Shall Richeson be electrocuted?

Will Richeson's sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life?

The Sunday AMERICAN has obtained the verdict of a jury composed of twelve of the most prominent clergymen in Greater Boston, who decide this question in the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow.

The Sunday AMERICAN will furnish one of the greatest symposiums ever given by any newspaper on this most remarkable case.

Here is the jury:

REV. DE WITT S. CLARK, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, Salem.

REV. GEORGE W. KING, D.D., pastor of the People's Temple.

REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church.

REV. CHARLES F. DOLE, of Jamaica Plain, president of the Twentieth Century Club.

REV. SAMUEL G. BABCOCK, archdeacon of the Episcopal Church in Massachusetts.

REV. JAMES SHEERIN, rector of St. Matthew's Church, South Boston.

REV. JOSEPH B. PALMER, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Salem.

REV. EDWARD F. MERRIAM, D.D., editor of "The Watchman," the Baptist Weekly.

REV. FREDERICK W. RUIS, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Salem, a friend of Richeson.

REV. O. P. GIFFORD, pastor of the Brookline Baptist Church.

REV. CHARLES A. FULTON, pastor of the Dudley Street Baptist Church.

REV. LEMUEL H. MURLIN, D.D., president of Boston University and a minister of the Methodist Church.

Will this verdict mean electrocution?

Does this jury of twelve prominent clergymen want Richeson's life saved?

Read the Sunday AMERICAN to-morrow and get the most remarkable phase of this great case.

This verdict should be read by every parishioner of the twelve jurymen and by everyone interested in the Richeson case.

HUNT SIX MEN WHO ATTACKED COUGHLIN

The police are hunting for six men, who, claiming they had a lease of the garage at No. 295 Prospect street, Cambridge, made a brutal assault on William A. Coughlin, proprietor of the Prospect street garage. One of the men struck him with a piece of pipe. All made their escape before the Cambridge police learned of the affair. Coughlin is now at the Cambridge Hospital, where he is suffering from a fractured skull and his recovery is doubtful.

Miss Alice Walmsley, Who Comes to Defence of College Girls

Honor System at Examinations Works Well at Simmons and Wellesley.

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

"There are very few cats at college—college girls are too busy to be catty."

Miss Alice Walmsley, matron of Simmons College and a Wellesley graduate, describes as "catty" all sorts of feminine foibles, from petty gossip to graver faults, and she says that college girls are not catty, because they have a very high sense of honor.

Miss Walmsley, after her four years at Wellesley, lived in a college settlement for a year, was head of the Wellesley Inn, a popular resort with the college girls, for three years, and is now matron at Simmons College. So she has lived in the college atmosphere for the last eight years.

MISS ALICE F WALMSLEY

We were talking, Miss Walmsley and I, about honor among women, and I remarked that they had just adopted the honor system at Barnard, the woman's annex to Columbia University in New York city.

"I am sure that they will find it satisfactory, because it has always worked so well at Wellesley, and we have it here at Simmons, too," commented Miss Walmsley.

The honor system means putting the girls on their honor at examinations, and then leaving them alone. There are no proctors in the room during the examination period to watch them, but after finishing her paper the student signs a pledge that no help has been given or received. This system is in force in most of the men's colleges, but the women's institutions have been slower in adopting it.

"There is no reason," Miss Walmsley continued, "why women's colleges should not rely on the girls honor, for the entire atmosphere is frank and open, and college women have a distinctly higher sense of honor than those outside. I think it is because their minds are taken up with larger interests than the petty trifles which fill so many women's lives. College women are a picked class. In a sense we get the cream of all the girls at college, and the longer they stay in college, the higher the grade becomes. That is, the ones who can not keep up the pace, drop out year by year, and the ones who stay to graduate, make a higher average than the entering class.

"There are very few 'cats' at college. I think the proportion is smaller than anywhere else in the world. And the reason is that there is less idleness of mind.

Danger in Idle Minds.

"You know the old saying, 'the devil finds work for idle hands to do,' and that applies to idle minds as well.

"It is the women with idle minds who make the mischief. They look around for something to interest them, and because there is so much meanness and petty gossip and slander in the world, they are soon deluged in it.

"When you stop to think, it is the little immaterial things that the society woman lies about. When it comes to the big risks and the sacrifices women are pretty fine and noble. But it is in the little immaterial things that they fall down, and it's because they have no sense of proportion. They are so absorbed in petty little details they have no perspective.

"With the college woman it is different. She had rather fail to pass than cheat in an examination, and she had rather own up that she had forgotten to do some little errand than devise an elaborate lie as to why she did not do it.

"Then, too, the college girl is usually in college because she wants to be. Very few are there because they are sent. And where there is no compulsion, there is freedom. There is nothing for the girl to fear, and nothing to conceal. College women are quite as honorable and straightforward in their dealings as their brothers. The men's colleges find the honor system works well, but it has worked quite as successfully in the women's colleges where it has been adopted."

RULE AUTOIST IS NOT A TRAVELLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The automobilist is not a traveller according to the United States Court of Customs Appeals. The contention of the government that an imported set of automobilist's tools was virtually a "travelling set" in the eyes of the tariff law, dutiable at 50 per cent. ad valorem, was denied. The court held that this article "intended for occasional and exceptional use," should be assessed at 40 per cent.

MAY MOVE NEW YORK NAVY YARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—There is a strong probability that the New York Navy Yard will be moved to New Jersey. So far has the new navy grown away from the old establishment that the need of a new naval base in place of the outgrown one in Brooklyn, officially known as the New York Navy Yard, has been recognized as one of urgent necessity.

RICHESON MAY QUIT FIGHT

good case for his defense. Then he breaks all precedent by insisting upon making a confession of murder in the first degree, after the district attorney had refused to make any compromise in return for a plea of guilty.

"Now what is next? It would not surprise me in the least to see Richeson desert his attorneys and consent to go to the electric chair without a fight for commutation. This action would not be half as big a surprise to us all as his other two actions."

A canvass of the members of the Executive Council, as it stands to-day, failed to show a single member who would forecast his vote on Richeson. The rather startling fact was learned that, although some of the members are against capital punishment generally, they are disposed to let the law take its course with Richeson, regarding his crime as an extreme one.

"Extreme Cases."

For instance, Councillor Fletcher said that he did not believe in capital punishment "except in extreme cases."

Yet he voted against the commutation of the death sentence of Phelps. It is taken for granted, then, that he would vote against Richeson.

It is believed that Councillors Cushing and Goetting would be against Richeson. From a little talk made the other day by Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce, it is believed that he would be in favor of capital punishment in the Richeson case, although he is generally opposed to it.

The only thing that may be said about Councillors Alexander McGregor, Edward G. Frothingham, Eben S. Keith and Winfield S. Schuster is that they have not indicated what they will do in the Richeson case. These men are studying the case and the wishes of the people. The vote of the Legislature on the man who is to succeed Quinn will show how the Legislature stands on the Richeson case.

Richeson in the jail is tended now by the regular guards. Sheriff John Quinn has removed the negro, Butts, from his post at Richeson's side. When told of this, the minister was at first depressed, but soon recovered his spirits.

Quinn Visits Richeson.

Sheriff Quinn has made his first visit to Richeson and declares that the prisoner seems in good health and good spirits for one who was condemned to die in a few weeks.

The prisoner told the sheriff that he had heard of his appointment as successor to Sheriff Seavey, and while he congratulated the new sheriff, he expressed his regret that he had resigned from the Governor's Council, as his views on capital punishment are well known. When Sheriff Quinn left the cell Richeson shook hands with him and expressed appreciation of the sheriff's encouraging words.

Sheriff Quinn urged Richeson's guards to especial vigilance, as it is the fear of the prosecution and the other jail officials that he may attempt suicide.

It is on this point that the counsel for the defence of Richeson and his guards disagree with the District Attorney and the jail officials. Mr. Morse expressed himself in these words:

"If the officials realize as I do how Richeson fears death, and how he will wait until there is absolutely no hope of escaping the death chair, they would not be so fearful of his attempting suicide. I have seen him once since he pleaded guilty to the charge of murder, and he seemed quite calm but as inscrutable as ever. He did not express any hope of commutation of his sentence, but in the questions that he asked it was evident that he had such hope."

More and more of the case developed against Richeson by the prosecution is becoming public, but probably none suspected how strong a point had been discovered in Cambridge by Captain Hurley of the police of that city.

SLEEP BADLY O'NIGHTS?

SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

EUGENE WALTER, WHO WRITES ON RICHESON CASE

The celebrated playwright who wrote such dramas as "The Easiest Way," "Paid in Full" and "The Wolf," contributes a powerful article of absorbing interest on the great New England tragedy to the Sunday American to-morrow.

Eugene Walter, the great American playwright, has written for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN an article on the most tragic human drama ever played on the stage of New England life—the Richeson case.

A master subject for a master pen is the Richeson case when treated by Mr. Walter.

The result is an article of absorbing interest, a powerful analysis of the case.

The instant the suggestion of Mr. Walter writing about Richeson is made the thought comes to the reader:

"What a topic for a constructor of drama."

The Richeson case and all that it involves form a tremendous drama in themselves. This drama includes a death more pathetic than that of Juliet, a murder more brutal than melodrama's wildest conception and a general atmosphere more gruesome than that of "Macbeth."

An article on this subject comes naturally to Mr. Walter. He has turned the full force of his keen, powerful intellect and the full dexterity of his facile pen to the task. The reader will find Mr. Walter's story unexcelled by any so far written on the Richeson case.

The public will do well, in view of this article by Mr. Walter particularly, to place an early order for to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN, as there will be heavy demand for it.

Eugene Walter is the author of several most successful plays.

He wrote "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way," and "The Wolf."

He dramatized "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the latest production from his pen.

Readers of the AMERICAN will recall the vivid lines of "The Wolf" which was published in full in the AMERICAN two years ago.

Over "Paid in Full" ensued one of the most noted controversies of the modern stage. The public remembers to-day the vigorous letter Mr. Walter wrote to Mayor Fitzgerald at the time of the local agitation over his celebrated drama.

Mr. Walter has led an eventful life. He has mingled with people of all sorts and conditions and has a profound knowledge of human nature. He is a keen analyst of thought and motive.

He is capable, if any man is, of treating the Richeson case in an illuminating manner. His article in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN will demonstrate this.

BARGE SUNK BY BELFAST

there before us. We did not find him, so we went back to the barge. We tried to find him, but couldn't. We supposed he must have gone to the steamer and that we had missed him in going back and forth. We stayed on board the barge looking for him until about two minutes before it sunk."

Awakened by Collision.

Andrew Anderson, a member of the barge who was saved, said:

"I was asleep when the steamer hit us. We got an awful lick and it woke up the captain and myself. We started to get out as Charley Johnson came. I went up with Johnson and roused Nelson, who was sleeping in the pilot house overhead. He said for me to go along and he would come, that he was all right.

"I saw Johnson go back afterward hunting for him, but thought then that Nelson had followed us on board the vessel."

The barge sank just as Johnson left it.

The barge was the property of the Susquehanna Railroad, and was on her way from Perth Amboy to Portland with a cargo of coal. She was brought into the harbor last night by the tug Tacony, and would have been taken on to Portland today.

Miss Marion S. Davis of Bucksport, Me., one of the passengers on board of the Belfast, said:

"When I heard the crash I at first thought the steamer was wrecked. I hurriedly slipped on some of my clothing and ran out onto the deck. Captain Brown and members of the crew said there was no danger and urged the passengers to be calm.

Passengers Alarmed.

"Many of the passengers were women. Some of them cried. One woman who had two cats carried on terribly. She feared her cats would be drowned.

"The crew urged those who were not fully dressed to go back to their staterooms because of the cold. Many of the passengers had carried their suitcases out on deck.

"I have travelled considerably on boats and have been in an accident before, so I was more calm than most of the passengers. I had been visiting in Boston for a week and was on my way home.

"When I was awakened by the crash I rang the bell in my stateroom, but there was no answer. I dressed as quickly as I could. I heard the bell signals to back the boat and felt the movement as it backed away. When I reached deck the barge had sunk.

"I saw the men who had been taken from the barge, also a small boy who had been taken aboard. He wore only overalls and was shivering in the cold. He was quickly taken to the cabin.

Held Back by Storm.

"While most of the women had only partly dressed before coming on deck others had fully dressed themselves, even to putting on their veils. The crew did fine excellent work in calming the fears of the passengers.

"Great sadness spread over the passengers when it was learned that one of the crew of the barge had been drowned.

"The Belfast had been scheduled to leave Boston at 5 o'clock, but she did not leave until after midnight, because of the storm."

BUYS KITTENS FOR $200 EACH

To-day sees the last of the poultry show in Mechanics building, at which exhibits worth fully $100,000 are on view, and which as attracted thousands of visitors. Much comment was heard to-day over the price paid at the cat show, just closed, for two kittens. It was learned to-day that Mrs. C. W. Chapin of New York gave $200 each for two blue kittens. They were sent to the show by Dr. J. L. Niven of London, Ontario, by a friend, who had made the trip to Boston with some exhibits of his own. Mrs. Chapin, who is a great cat fancier, saw the pair, and upon learning that they were for sale, immediately purchased them.

Harmless Smoke Cures Catarrh.

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way and It Costs Nothing to Try.

This preparation of herbs, leaves, flowers and berries (containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs) is either smoked in an ordinary clean pipe or smoking tube, and by drawing the medicated smoke into the mouth and inhaling into the lungs or sending it out through the nostrils in a perfectly natural way, the worst case of Catarrh can be eradicated.

It is not unpleasant to use, and at the same time it is entirely harmless, and can be used by man, woman or child.

Just as Catarrh is contracted by breathing cold or dust and germ-laden air, just so this balmy antiseptic smoking remedy goes to all the affected parts of the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs. It can readily be seen why the ordinary treatments, such as sprays, ointments, salves, liquid or tablet medicines, fail—they do not and can not reach all the affected parts.

If you have catarrh of the nose, throat or lungs, choking, stopped-up feeling, colds, catarrhal headaches; if you are given to hawking and spitting, this simple yet scientific treatment should cure you.

An illustrated book which goes thoroughly into the whole question of the cause, cure and prevention of catarrh will, upon request, be sent you by Dr. J. W. Blosser, 210 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga.

He will, also, mail you five days' free treatment. You will at once see that it is a wonderful remedy, and, as it only costs one dollar for the regular treatment, it is within the reach of everyone. It is not necessary to send any money—simply send your name and address, and the booklet and free trial package will be mailed you immediately.

YOUR LUNGS

ARE YOUR LUNGS WEAK OR PAINFUL?

Do your lungs ever bleed?
Do you have night sweats?
Have you pains in chest and sides?
Do you spit yellow and black matter?
Are you continually hawking and coughing?
Do you have pains under your shoulder blades?

THESE ARE REGARDED SYMPTOMS OF LUNG TROUBLE AND CONSUMPTION

You should take immediate steps to check the progress of these symptoms. The longer you allow them to advance and develop, the more deep seated and serious your condition becomes.

We Stand Ready to Prove to You absolutely, that Lung Germine, the German Treatment, has cured completely and permanently case after case of advanced Consumption (Tuberculosis), Chronic Bronchitis, Catarrh of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Bronchial Tubes and other lung troubles. Many sufferers who had lost all hope and who had been given up by physicians have been permanently cured by Lung Germine. It is not only a cure for Consumption but a preventative. If your lungs are merely weak and the disease has not yet manifested itself, you can prevent its development, you can build up your lungs and system to their normal strength and capacity. Lung Germine has cured advanced Consumption, in many cases over five years ago, and the patients remain strong and in splendid health today.

KINNELL CHAIN SHOES

Give Your Horse 4 Sure Feet To Work On!

EVERY HORSE THAT WEARS KINNELL-CHAIN-SHOES IS ENABLED TO STAND UP AND DO A FULL DAY'S WORK—

EVEN ON ICY ASPHALT.

JOHN WANAMAKER, Philadelphia, says of the Kinnell-Chain-Shoes: "One pair of horses will do the work of four without them. We found that out from actual test here in the City."

"Fit like a glove, and go on as easily." Save their cost in one day.

THERE'S THE REASON

Never grow dull. Sharp till the finish, and then some more. Just the thing to slip on for an hour or two mornings and evenings when the streets are slippery.

To Select right size, measure across here

KINNELL-CHAIN-SHOES not only absolutely PREVENT SLIPPING but also

Protect the Frog and Sole From Injury

because every time the horse puts his weight on his feet, the links between the ordinary shoe and the ground that bear all the weight, turn part way over, thus sharpening and tightening all four chains and making a suspension bridge of the hollow of the foot. When the horse lifts his feet, the chains loosen slightly and the snow shakes out.

Since the invention of the Kinnell-Chain-Shoe (WHICH DOES FOR THE HORSE WHAT THE NON-SKID CHAIN DOES FOR THE AUTOMOBILE), there is no excuse for horses slipping and falling.

Put a set on your horse and make a noise like an auto.

Every driver can carry a set of Kinnell-Chain-Shoes in his wagon, and when the streets become suddenly slippery, NO MATTER WHERE HE IS, he can stop and slip on his horse's feet in a MINUTE and go along as though the streets were dry.

After one trial, you will never be without them.

Cures Asthma

Thousands of Dollars Now Being Spent by a Buffalo Institution in Sending

Free Treatment to Asthma Sufferers

A New Home Cure That Anyone Can Use With Sure Results.

We have a New Method that Cures Asthma, and we want you to try it at our expense. No matter whether your case is of long standing or recent development, whether it is present as occasional or chronic Asthma — no matter in what climate you live, no matter what your age or occupation, our method is a practically certain cure right in your own home.

We especially want to send it to those apparently hopeless cases, where all forms of inhalers, douches, opium preparations, fumes, "patent smokes," etc., have failed. We want to show every one at our own expense that this new method will end all difficult breathing, all wheezing, and all those terrible paroxysms, at once and for all time.

We have now proven conclusively that Asthma is a poison—and leading physicians have been forced to agree with our conclusions. Asthma has been one of the most puzzling and stubborn diseases with which the medical profession has had to deal. The trouble has been that the usual treatment was directed toward relieving rather than curing.

Almost anyone can give you something to ease your immediate suffering, but our treatment is a positive cure and drives the poison out of the system for all time to come. Thoroughly eradicates it.

This is the wonderful part of our method. It leaves you not only free from the poison, but so strengthens and purifies the entire system that you are able to resist any future attack. You can put your faith in this method and know that you have at last found the relief you so long have sought.

Hay Fever, Bronchitis and all Diseases of an Asthmatic Nature quickly yield to this System of Treatment.

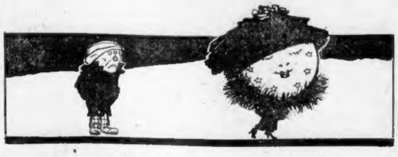
DOWNWARD REVISION

By MORTON BIRGE

THERE are eighty million dollars more, the tax officials say,
In the Bay State's valuation than a year ago to-day.
In our hearts we know, however, this is foolishness and such.
What we think of eighty millions is there isn't all that much.



IF they scaled it to eight million we might try to get a share,
And eight hundred thousand dollars—even that is pretty fair.
And a piece of eighty thousand isn't bad to contemplate,
And, if you are talking thousands, we'd take interest in eight.

BUT, if you come down to cases, we'd admire eight hundred bones.
While the sum of eighty dollars staggers what the writer owns.
S'pose we stop these flights of fancy. Let us talk like honest men—
Can you lend us eight cold dollars till the ghost comes 'round again?

LUCIA DELIGHTS BIG GATHERING

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Tetrazzini and Constantino in "Lucia" drew another capacity house to the Boston Opera last night. The soprano was in excellent voice and the usual scenes of delight and enthusiasm occurred at the end of each act.

There is something inspiring in a great audience at the opera and that of last night doubtless had its effect upon the singers.

It is quaint to consider that Lucia follows directly upon heels of "Pelleas et Melisande," for they are the two extremes of grand opera.

"Lucia" is the old-fashioned ballad opera where melody follows melody and the characters vie in feats of vocal strength.

"Pelleas" is the arch enemy of melody. It is all orchestra and all dramatic acting. Dramatic acting did not exist when Lucia was written, and few of the coloratura singers of to-day can act.

Comparisons are odious and let us not attempt to measure or compare the amount of pleasure we extract from the works of Debussy and Donizette.

This was the third performance of "Lucia" this season and the second with Tetrazzini. The first time she sang in the title part she was suffering from a cold. Last night she was in better voice, yet she seemed nervous during the first act and sang several bars out of tune. In the sextet she was her old self and in the mad scene incomparable.

Constantino, as usual, sang superbly. His Edgardo is unequalled to-day and it is always memorable. Polese as Henry Ashton is excellent. The chorus sang well and Moranzoni conducted in typically spirited style.

RING SPINNERS PROTEST WAGE CUT

FALL RIVER, Jan. 13.—Ring spinners employed in the Kerr factories of the American Thread Company are the only ones among this city's 35,000 operatives so far reported as having made their protest practically against a reduction in wages in consequence of the enforcement of the fifty-four hour law. Piece hands in all the 104 mills expect to suffer a loss for a short time, but are confident that they will be able to make it up by efficiency.

LAST CHANCE ON MINCE PIES

This is the last day for housewives and prospective housewives to send in their recipes for making mince pies, the delicious kind that tickle the palate of New Englanders.

The Mince Pie Editor of the AMERICAN, who has charge of the contest, announces that it will close at noon to-day. Remember the old adage: The last shall be first and the first shall be last. So don't hesitate because this is the last day.

Sunday's AMERICAN will give the names of the winners. Every participant in the contest will receive a square deal. Expert assistants will look over the letters with the Mince Pie Editor. No one who sends in a letter need fear that she will be slighted. Her ideas on the pie question will be given ample consideration. Remember, the prizes for the best recipes are one of $5 and five of $1 each.

How it Started.

This contest, which has proved entertaining and instructive, started as a result of a discussion originated by the Department of Agriculture of the United States as to what should constitute a good mince pie. New England housewives know the answer That is why so many of them have entered the AMERICAN'S contest.

The judges, all expert in the culinary line, are Mme. Maeterlinck, the opera star. She has had an abundance of experience as cook at her home in France. May Irwin, the actress, another judge, is an author of one of the best cook books ever published. That's going some. Then there is Frank Kawa. Frank is known far and wide as a judge of pies. He is the pastry chef at the Hotel Lenox. Miss Mary McDermald of the Y. W. C. A. School of Domestic Science will also assist in picking the winners.

Some of the Recipes.

Here is my recipe for making crust for two pies:

Two cups of flour, 2 cups of lard and 1 of butter, 1 teaspoonful of sugar, a little salt and just a pinch of baking powder; take knife and cut the butter and lard into the flour, sugar and salt and baking powder till it just looks like suet chopped up very fine; take a little cold water and mix not too stiff; just enough flour on board to roll out paste; divide into four pieces and roll out the size of tin; grease well the tins with lard; put on the bottom paste and trim it the size; use about six tablespoonfuls of mince meat according to the size, the wet the edge of the bottom paste and after rolling out the paste for top fold it in two and make cuts in it to let steam out; put it on top and trim it round the edges; crush the top with a little cold milk and bake about 20 minutes.

MRS. THOMAS R. RITCHIE,
36 Hudson avenue, Lawrence.

Two bowls finely chopped beef; four bowls of chopped apples, one and one-half bowls of raisins, one bowl of currants, one-third of a pound of citron, cut in very small pieces, small teacupful of finely chopped suet, grated rind and juice of two lemons, one bowl of sugar, one-half a cupful of molasses, a wine glass of brandy, and enough beef liquor for moistening, two teaspoonfuls of mace, one teaspoonful of cloves, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two whole nutmegs grated and salt to taste.

BACON'S LETTER OF RESIGNATION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The letter which Ambassador Bacon wrote to President Taft resigning his post at Paris, and the reply which Mr. Taft made to it were given out to-day.

Mr. Bacon gives as his only reason for resigning the fact that he has been selected a Fellow of Harvard University. He adds, however, that he wants to be of service to his country, even in a small way, after his return, and also wants to be useful to his party.

In replying, the President said that he regretted the retirement of the ambassador, but that he realized that Mr. Bacon should divide his time and service between his country and his university. The letters were as follows:

Mr. Bacon's Letter.

American Embassy, Paris, January 2, 1912.

Dear Mr. President:

"You will forgive me, I know, for asking for a moment of your valuable time to read a personal letter, for in no other way can I say to you what I have to say.

"The President and Fellows of Harvard, the corporation, so-called have made me a Fellow to fill the vacancy in their number caused by the death of Judge Lowell of Boston. This service to my alma mater, I feel that I cannot decline, besides being naturally very proud to be given the honor of this—the Harvard 'blue ribbon'. This appointment is, as you know, one of active service for life, and as there is much work to be done every week, the corporation must be in close personal touch with Combride, and live within easy reach. For this reason I am obliged most reluctantly to tender my resignation as your ambassador to France.

Thanks for the President.

I cannot begin to express my grateful appreciation of your great kindness in having given me this opportunity, of which I have been very proud, and which I have enjoyed more than I can tell you. The honor of having represented you here, sir, will always be one of my brightest memories, and I thank you from my heart. My regret is very sincere, but you will understand better than anybody the strength of my associations and my loyalty to my college and my unwilling to decline the honor of her service.

Although giving up the foreign service for this reason, I have a strong desire to take part at home, even in some small way, in the good work to be done there, whether it be civic, financial or industrial.

"If there be any way in which I can serve you and the party, I shall be proud to be called upon.

My resignation, of course, will be at your pleasure, and I feel sure that President Lowell, although he has been unable to delay longer my appointment, would be willing to excuse me until such time as it may be convenient for you to appoint my successor.

Thank you again, dear Mr. President, a thousand times for the honor you have done me, and for all your kindly consideration, and, with great respect and my kindest regards to Mrs. Taft, and a very happy new year to you and yours, believe me,

Most sincerely, your obedient servant,
ROBERT BACON.

The President's Reply.

The President's letter follows:

White House, Washington,
Jan. 12, 1912.

My Dear Mr. Ambassador:

I greatly regret accepting your resignation, but I admit the weight of your reason for tendering it. I have a letter from President Lowell, in which he insists that Harvard is entitled to divide with the government with your service. I yield.

I am glad you have been two years our representative in Paris. I am glad that you have enjoyed it. You have done everythink well. I hope and believe that your career at home will be equally successful and useful. I accept your resignation, to take effect upon the appointment and qualification of your successor. Yours sincerely,

WILLIAM H. TAFT.

To the Hon. Robert Bacon.

PROPOSE, GIRLS; GET THAT $25

If you're out of a job and really, truly need some money right away quick, don't get desperate and try to steal it and perhaps land in prison for a month or two, but just lead the nicest little girl you know on to popping the question. When that trying ordeal is over set the wedding date and come to the Boston AMERICAN and claim that twenty-five dollars.

Yes, it's all right, perfectly proper and all that because this is leap year. Then, too, when you think of it that's a nice easy way to earn a quarter of a hundred, so much better than taking it wrongfully, for instead of prison bars he'll have a nice little home and a sweet little wife, and if he's persevering enough to get that much he'll certainly get a job.

Just Tell Him, That's All.

And as for you, girls, if you want a pretty wedding dress and won't get married until you can get it, and you know John loves you, but just can't muster up courage enough to tell you about it, why this is your chance, too.

Just tell him all about it, get your wedding dress, and you certainly can get a dandy dress at this time of year for twenty-five dollars, get married, come into the AMERICAN office and collect, and then pay for your dress. Then you can go home and live happily ever after. Lots of girls could stretch that twenty-five dollars out and make it buy a whole new wardrobe.

Then, too, think of what a cute, original sort of thing that would be to do. The twenty-five dollars is right here and some one will beat you to it if you don't hustle, so call him up, telegraph him, send the police after him—get him somehow and tell him right away all about it, and if he's any kind of a fellow he won't stand there and see you choke to death in the attempt to ask him to be yours for the rest of his life, but he'll help you out a bit, just like a true gentleman should.

But You Must Propose.

But you MUST do the proposing; he can add a word of encouragement here and there and make things just a bit easier by his apparent willingness, and then, oh, joy! the worst will be over. Most of the "Barkises are willin'," girls; they're only a mite shy about letting you know it, so take time by the forelock. Come along! come along; come and get the twenty-five.

TUGBOAT CREW SAVED IN COLD

The Towboat Mars of the Boston Towboat Company struck on Point Allerton bar, one mile and a half southwest of Boston Light at 3 a. m. to-day. The crew of 13 men were saved.

The Hull life savers, commanded by Captain W. C. Sparrow, saw the tug in a dangerous position and launched the life boat in front of the Nautilus Inn at Hull, three-quarters of a mile from the wreck. After a hard struggle in the bitter cold, the life saving crew succeeded in reaching the wreck and brought the crew of the Mars ashore. All of the crew of the Mars are badly frostbitten. They were taken to the Hull Life Saving Station and cared for until brought to Boston on the 8:10 train this morning. An atempt will be made to get the Mars off the bar at high tide. She has a great hole stove in her bow and will be high and dry at low water.

CAROLYN LOST; CREW IS SAFE

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 13.—A few minutes after thirty-two men had been taken from her deck to-day by the Burnt Island Life Saving crew, the British steamship Carolyn, which grounded on Metenic Island yesterday, went to pieces. Her $300,000 cargo is a total loss.

The life-savers could not return through the surf to their station and were taken aboard with the men they had saved by the revenue cutter Androscoggin.

STATE HOUSE NOTES

Resolutions asking Congress to reduce the first-class postage rate from 2 cents to a cent have been filed by Representative Underhill of Somerville. Among other important and interesting petitions filed are: Of Representative Connors of Boston, for the appointment of a commission of three by the Governor to investigate all securities offered for sale in this State and to determine whether they are safe investments; of William H. C. Wright, to prohibit all theatrical entertainments on the Lord's Day, except municipal concerts and entertainments given by religious societies in church buildings; of Louis Berenson, that the Boston Transit Commission investigate the cost of removing the elevated structure and substituting a tunnel between the Washington-street tunnel and Dudley street.

The United Improvement Association has presented a bill to the Legislature aiming to reduce the fire hazard in Greater Boston. The bill provides that buildings hereafter constructed which are more than one story in height shall have roofs of non-inflammable material; also that buildings for more than two families shall have outside walls of brick or cement and dwellings of inflammable material shall be at least five feet from the lot lines.

The abolishment of the poll tax is proposed in a bill by Representative Isaac Gordon of Ward 9, Boston. He also has a bill seeking to revolutionize the automobile business by prohibiting the use of motor vehicles, except those of fire and police departments, capable of making a speed of more than thirty miles an hour.

A bill providing that appointments made by the Governor shall become effective without the approval of the Executive Council was introduced in the Legislature by Representative John D. Connors of Boston.

KELIHER STILL KEEPS UP HOPE

The term of eighteen years imposed upon William J. Keliher for complicity in wrecking the National City Bank in Cambridge may be reduced when he is taken before the United States District Court for re-sentence. Allowance may be made for the eleven months "Big Bill" was kept at the East Cambridge jail pending the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and also because of his confinement in default of the $50,000 bail.

It is doubtful if the fight to save him from a long prison term will be carried to the United States Supreme Court. Harvey H. Pratt, of his counsel says money is lacking. Keliher's personal property is tied up as a result of the suit of Receiver John L. Bates of the wrecked bank against the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company. "Big Bill" is hoping that some of his relatives or friends will come forward with the large amount of money needed to continue the fight in the court at Washington.

The decision handed down by the Circuit Court of Appeals provides that Keliher may be taken before the District Court for re-sentence within sixty days. His original sentence was imposed by the Circuit Court, which was abolished the first of the year. As the re-sentence must come from the District Court, it may be necessary to forward the mandate to Washington before his appearance in court.

$200,000 FIRE LOSS IN PICTURE THEATRE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.—Fire broke out in the Lubin motion picture and vaudeville house on Market street, near Tenth, early to-day, and spread to the five and ten-cent store adjoining. The theatre building was destroyed and the neighboring structure was partially in ruins before the fire was got under control. The damage is estimated at $200,000.

Duffy Picked to Win Over Brooks at West End Club

By JACK CONWAY.

It will be a case of a slugger versus a scientific boxer when Terry Brooks of New York and Freddy Duffy of Jamaica Plain clash in an eight-round bout at the American A. C. to-night. Brooks is a regular slam bang fighter and is continually trying to rough it with his opponent.

On the other hand, Freddy depends upon his great speed and cleverness to bring home the bacon. Duffy is considered one of the best lightweights in New England. His recent victory over George Alger of Cambridge at the West End club proved this beyond the last question of a doubt.

Alger has made a great record in the squared circle. He has defeated no less a person than Battling Nelson. Yet he was vanquished by Duffy.

If Brooks puts up as good a battle as he did in his two former appearances at the American A. C., the bout is sure to be a slashing affair. Terry is a very aggressive boxer and doesn't know the meaning of the word quit.

When the New Yorker first appeared in a local ring he was awfully "green." He was willing to mix things, but he usually missed about nine out of every ten punches. Terry has improved with experience and is now fairly clever.

On paper it looks as though Duffy would win. But then "Fighting Terry" has a habit of upsetting the "dope."

The men weighed in at 136 pounds at the office of the sealer of weights and measures this afternoon in the presence of the writer. Both men made the weight with ease. There are many people who believed that Brooks could not make as low as 136.

The rest of the card is well balanced. Mark Spencer, the local bantam of ebony hue, will swap wallops with Willie Faust, while Elli Valley will try to slip one over on Bud Shadkins.

The leading heavyweights of the past and present decade are passing away many a pleasant hour these days talking about fake fights.

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett and Jack Johnson have been doing most of the talking during the past few days, but now old Bob Fitzsimmons bobs up on the horizon with a weird story of an attempt to bribe him. "Lanky Bob" says that he refused to accept $750,000—please don't get excited—to fake with Corbett at Carson City in 1897. Fitz claims that a New York gambling syndicate offered him $250,000 in cold cash and $500,000 in tickets on Corbett if he would promise to throw the fight. If the New York bookies could get Fitzsimmons to lay down they expected to clean up in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. The old master says that he listened to the offers of the sure-thing men and then went and consulted with his wife. She advised her husband to have nothing to do with the New York syndicate and as a result Fitz went in and fought on his merits. Bob won the fight by a k. o. punch in the fourteenth round. This talk about fake fights should cease. It casts a shadow on the sport. There have been many fake fights in the past and there will be fake fights in the future, but there is no good derived by the leaders in the game trying to get cheap notoriety by talking about alleged fake fights which they cannot back up with facts.

Matty Baldwin certainly gave Pal Moore one fine beating over in New York the other night. And, take it from me, any lightweight who can take the measure of the Philadelphia "flea" is traveling at a pretty fast clip. Matty appears to be getting better with every fight. A few years ago the knockers claimed that the Bunker Hill "Bearcat" was all in, but here is where they made one big mistake. A great deal of Matty's success in the ring during the past few years is due to Alex McLean. It is almost needless to say that Alex is one of the cleverest handlers of athletes that ever came over the pike. And when it comes to business ability, I guess we will have to doff our bonnets to McLean. Baldwin will not meet Grover Hayes at Youngstown, Ohio, on the 19th of this month, as the latter has broken a bone in one of his hands.

This is the day upon which "Porky" Flynn is scheduled to take a fall out of Jack Lester. These two heavyweights give battle this afternoon at Hugh McIntosh's big stadium at Rushcutter's Bay. Boston fight "fans" are pulling for the West End boy to win by the K. O. route. Flynn is now in Australia with Sam Langford and Joe Woodman. It is more than likely that Sam Langford and Sam McVey will be signed up to meet again in the near future. The result of their bout on Christmas Day was unsatisfactory to all concerned. The decision was a very questionable one. McVey had no more license to beat Langford than Jim Flynn would have to win a decision over Jack Johnson.

There is an Irish bantamweight champion now in New York who is after the scalp of one Jimmy Walsh. His name is Bert Moughton and he has come to this country looking for fight. Bert also claims that he is the champion of England, Scotland and France. He sends word that he is willing to meet the local bantamweight star at 118 pounds. Moughton may be one swell fighter, but if he ever meets Jimmy don't sink all the roll on him, for Walsh comes pretty near being the whole works in the bantam division.

Kid McCoy is fighting in rare form over in Gay Paree. The old-timer has won the last three fights in which he has participated in on the other side of the big pond. It is pretty tough when the former stars of the squared circle have to don ring togs in order to get enough money to pay the board bill. McCoy will undoubtedly be able to hold his own against second and third raters for some time to come, but he will be knocked out by the first good man that he meets. Boxers should salt away enough worldly goods when they are in their prime in order that they may not have to keep on fighting when they rightfully should be taking things easy in the down-and-out club.

Al Delmont has been matched to meet Frankie Burns of Jersey City in a fifteen-round bout before the Franklin A. C. of New Haven on January 19. Jimmy Walsh was originally billed to clash with Jimmy DeForest's clever bantamweight, but the match fell through. Delmont is sure to give Burns a great battle. Al hasn't done a great deal of work for several months and is in the pink of condition, as he so clearly demonstrated when he defeated Young Pierce of Philadelphia at the American A. C. last Wednesday.

Johnny Connolly, the Scotch lightweight champion, is back in town after his victory over Kid Flemming at Augusta, Me., the other night. Eddie Mack's whirlwind is open to meet any man of his weight in New England. It wouldn't be a bad idea for some live matchmaker to arrange for another meeting between Connolly and Dave Deshler. These lightweights met several weeks ago at Manchester, N. H., and the bout was declared a draw.

There is a letter in this office for Joe Nelson, manager of Johnny Gallant of Chelsea.

MACK ANNOUNCES SPRING TRIP GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.—Connie Mack, manager of the World's champions, has announced the itinerary of his two baseball teams through the South this Spring. The first batch of players, known as the "second team," will leave for San Antonio about February 19. The "first team" will leave later. After the preliminary work out in San Antonio, the teams will play games in the following cities: First team—March 16 and 17, Austin; March 23, Galveston; March 24, Houston; March 25 and 26, New Orleans; March 27, Montgomery; March 28, Spartanburg; March 29, Baltimore; March 31, Newark, N. J.; April 7, Jersey City; April 14, Baltimore. Second team—March 23, 30 and 31, Houston; March 24, Galveston; April 1, 2 and 3, New Orleans; April 4 and 5, Mobile; April 6 and 7, Montgomery; April 8, Charlotte; April 9, Baltimore, April 10, Trenton, N. J.

TIGER FIVE BEATEN BY COLUMBIA 29-16

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Columbia defeated Princeton at basketball on Columbia's court by a score of 29 to 16. The outcome of the match was a surprise, for Columbia had not fared very well in previous matches. The Tigers were outplayed from whistle to whistle and were never dangerous. Meenan and C. Benson starred for Columbia, while Uhl and Heath scored the greatest number of goals for Princeton. The game was one in the intercollegiate series.

HOLDOUT PASKERT NOW COMES TO BAT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.—Advices from Cleveland state that Dode Paskert, the sensational centre fielder of the Phillies, has repented of his action as a hold-out and will sign a contract within the next few days. Paskert is in high glee over the chances of the Phillies for the pennant next year, and has become a bona fide Philadelphia booster, for he says in a letter to a friend received to-day that both home teams will win in their respective organizations.

ICE YACHT RACING SEASON OPENS TO-DAY

Ice and wind being favorable the ice yacht racing season on Upper Mystic Lake, West Medford and Winchester, will open to-day. The racing this Winter will be under the management of the Medford Boat Club. Already there are eight boats on the lake to compete for the cup offered by the Medford organization.

SOMERVILLE BOY TO MANAGE WORCESTER

Norman Mitchell, '14, of Somerville, has been elected manager of the Worcester Academy hockey team and Wellington Lewis, '13, of Rochester, N. Y., appointed as captain of the team pro tem. The team will play its first game to-day against the Tatnuck Country Club.

CARNEY BEATS DeORO FOR POOL TITLE

DENVER, Col., Jan. 13.—Joseph Carney of San Francisco, after a remarkably sensational finish, won the final block of fifty points in the contest with Alfred DeOro, thus becoming three-cushion champion of the world over the former holder of the Lambert trophy.

RULE MAKERS' MEETING.

Secretary E. K. Hall of the intercollegiate football rules committee has issued a notice calling for a meeting of the rules committee in New York, February 2 and 3. It is understood that no radical changes will be made in the rules this year.

REJECT $50,000 BID FOR BATTLE

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Canadians are anxious to witness the Johnson-Flynn battle, the Bassano Athletic Club of Bassano, Alberta, Ca., wiring a 600-word message to Manager Curley, representing Flynn, in which a flat bid of $50,000 is made and ample assurances given that the offer is bona fide.

Bassano is midway between Winnipeg and Vancouver and within a radius of 200 miles there are 500,000 people, a majority of whom enjoy a big battle.

Curley rejected the offer, as the Canadian law does not permit finish fights or knockouts and this prevents a championship battle. The same law caused the rejection of a similar offer from Toronto.

Curley said there was little doubt the battle wold be staged at Wendover, Nev., by the Salt Lake promoters. The Western Pacific Railroad Company to-day signed agreements to build the arena.

Curley received articles of agreement for the proposed fight between Al Palzer and Flynn in New York. The articles were signed by Palzer and Tom O'Rourke, but Curley rejected them, as they demanded clean breaks and do not permit infighting or kidney blows.

Infighting is the chief asset of Flynn, and Curley says he will not sign for any battle where this is prohibited. The New York law insists upon clean breaks and the Palzer-Flynn battle will probably go to San Francisco for this reason.

Coffroth of San Francisco has bid for this battle to be staged for twenty rounds February 22, and Curley has accepted his offer.

CHELSEA Y. M. H. A. TO HOLD 5-MILE WALK

The Chelsea Young Men's Hebrew Association will hold a five-mile walk to-morrow. This is one of a series of walks which the Chelsea Y. M. H. A. is planning, where there will be three cups as prizes for the first, second and third winners. The boys have been training for some time, and a close race is expected. H. Yosell, athletic director, has charge of the event, and is receiving a large number of entries. The start will be made at the club's headquarters in Chelsea square at 10 a. m. The following have been appointed judges: Messrs. Samuel Markell, A. H. Klubock, George E. Gordon, M. Yosell and J. London.

HAIGHEY WINS QUICK VERDICT OVER PERRY

LOWELL, Jan 13.—Charley Haighey of this city signalled his return to the ring by winning over George Perry in less than a round of boxing. The men had hardly time to square off when Haighey let fly a right-hander that landed flush on Perry's jaw. The punch was obviously a lucky one. The men were rematched for an early date.

Young Erne vs. Tommy Howell, Philadelphia.

Honey Mellody vs. W. West and Harry Thomas vs. Harry Tracy, New York.

ATTELL TO SIGN WITH DRISCOLL

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—It was announced to-day by George Weeden, manager of Abe Attell, the featherweight champion of the world, that he was negotiating for a match between his protege and Jem Driscoll, the featherweight champion of England. The match, if booked, will be pulled off in England for a purse and a side bet of $5,000.

Such a bout would prove to be the most interesting since that bout at Reno a couple of years ago. Both of these men have been boosted in their respective countries as the world's champions, and the bout would be of world-wide interest. Driscoll and Attell met several years ago, and it was a slashing match from the start.

Driscoll has been over in England for the past few years, but he has always to England, so the big match is probable. been anxious to come to America to have another bout with Attell. Attell has now decided that he would like to take a trip

WORLD RECORD MILER IN HALF-MILE RACE

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—John Paul Jones of Cornell, the world's record holder of the one-mile run, will start in the half-mile handicap closed to collegian athletes at the initial athletic games of the New York University, which will be held at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory to-night. This will be his first appearance in this borough. Almost every college in the East has sent in a large entry for the events closed to college athletes. There will also be six races closed to athletes registered in the Amateur Athletic Union. Abel Kiviat of the Irish-American A. C., and Leroy Durland, the 300-yard indoor national title holder, will also be contestants.

TIGER CREW TO RACE COLUMBIA AND PENN

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 13.—Announcement of a pending triangular crew race between Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia, to be held here some time in May, was given out by Manager D. Paulson Foster of the university crew. Though undecided as to the date, it is probable that May 11, the day of the Cornell-Princeton baseball game, will be the final choice, because of the crowd which is sure to be here for that event. The race will be held over the Lake Carnegie two-mile course, and will be the first time Princeton has met Columbia and Pennsylvania on the water for more than thirty years.

BASKETBALL RESULTS

St. Mary's five of the Greater Boston A. A. C. Basketball League defeated the Fr. Mathew team 25 to 20 at St. Mary's Hall, North End. St. Mary's second five defeated Fr. Mathew's second 36 to 24.

PLAY GOOD GOLF AT PINEHURST

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 13.—Numerous keen matches added to the interest of the first and second match play rounds in the ninth annual midwinter golf tournament, among the fastest being a twenty-hole victory by Harold Slater of Fox Hills, New York, from C. W. Hartwell of Woodland, which gives Slater the right to play Walter J. Travis in the semi-final. Other survivors in the President's Cup division are F. T. Keating of Lenox and I. S. Robeson of Oak Hill.

In the second division competition was even keener, S. H. Martell, Jr., of Montreal defeating P. S. McLaughlin of Wykagyl in a 21-hole battle, and T. B. Boyd of the Belle Reive Country Club winning from E. A. Johnson of the Baltimore Country Club on the nineteenth green. In the third division two matches required extra holes and in the fourth there were two 19 and one 21 hole wins. The summary of play in the first two of the six divisions follows:

President's Cup or First Division—First Round.—I. S. Robeson, Oak Hill, beat A. J. Watson, Dunwoodie, 2 and 1; F. T. Keating, Lenox, beat Allan Lard, Chevy Chase, 1 up; Chisholm Beach, Fox Hills, beat A. P. MacMahon, Herne Bay, 2 and up; E. J. Spaulding, Waubanakee, beat H. C. Kayser, Scarsdale, 3 and 2; C. N. Phillips, Greenwich Country, beat W. E. Truesdell, Huntington, 3 and 1; Harold Slater, Fox Hills, beat C. W. Hartwell, Woodland, 1 up (20 holes); Robert Hunter, Wee Burn, beat J. D. Foot, Apawamis, 4 and 3; W. J. Travis, Garden City, beat N. W. Dean, Oakley, 6 and 5.

Second Round—Robeson beat Keating, 5 and 3; Beach beat Spaulding, 4 and 3; Slater beat Phillips, 5 and 3; Travis beat Hunter, 4 and 3.

Consolation.—First Round.—Watson beat Lard, 3 and 1; Kayser beat MacMahon, 2 and 1; Hartwell beat Truesdell, 8 and 6; Dean beat Foot, 7 and 6.

Governor's Cup or Second Division—First Round—T. B. Boyd, Belle Reive, beat E. A. Johnston, Baltimore Country, 1 up (19 holes); S. H. Martel, Jr., Montreal, beat P. S. MacLaughlin, Wykagyl, 1 up (21 holes); Dr. C. H. Gardner, Agawam, beat George C. Dutton, Oakley, 2 up; C. L. Becker, Woodland, beat W. L. Crocker, Brae Burn, 2 up; Z. T. Miller, Dunwoodie, beat F. H. McCall, Atlantic City, 1 up; F. K. Robeson, Oak Hill, beat H. M. Adams, Nassau, 2 and 1; W. G. Clark, Woodland, beat G. L. Young, Canoe Brook, 5 and 4; C. B. Hudson, North Fork Country, beat W. C. Freeman, Englewood, 2 up.

Second Round—Boyd beat Martel, 5 and 4; Gardner beat Becker, 1 up; Miller beat Robeson, 1 up; Hudson beat Clark, 2 up.

Consolation, First Round—MacLaughlin beat Johnston, 5 and 4; Dutton beat Crocker, 5 and 4; McCall won from Adams, by default; Freeman beat Young, 3 and 2.

ACT AT ONCE!

THIS ATLAS is entirely new, from cover to cover, and has no superior. Produced at great cost to mark the beginning of the new census period, it comes into the great family of Atlases along entirely new lines and clearly out of the rut. It contains everything worth while to be found in any other Atlas (in the way of maps and descriptive matter), but in addition thereto it brings within its scope the vital statistics of the world, and particularly of the United States, as taken direct from the Government Census Reports of 1910 and the latest Foreign Official Reports. Its maps of all states, territories and countries of the world are extra large and entirely new, all printed in colors.

THE NEW CENSUS ATLAS OF THE WORLD

contains over 100 Maps and Diagrams in colors; the Flags of all Nations; the Arms of all Nations; Comparative sizes of all European Nations; Military Forces of the World; Military Strength of the World; Comparative Sizes of the United States Possessions; Land Elevations; Ocean Depths; Rainfall of the United States; Conservation Maps of the United States Forests; Productive Areas of Principal Commercial Staples of the World; Statistical Diagram showing Growth of the United States; Steamship Routes; Maps of all States, Territories and Countries of the World.

24 PAGES OF 1910 POPULATION STATISTICS

There are over 100 beautiful half-tone pictures illustrating the descriptive matter pertaining to all countries of the globe. These pictures are strictly up to date, showing Wireless Telegraphy; Rescues by Wireless; Types of Aerial Craft; Comparative Sizes of Aerial Navies; Progress of Panama Canal; Rubber Growing; Tobacco Curing; Types of the Modern Floating Cities, etc.

The Statistical Department is replete with information. All census figures are given. Commodities of the World, with maps showing principal areas of production. These statistics handle all questions in regard to production of hundreds of commodities, such as pig iron, coal, petroleum, manufactured products, imports, exports, farm products; also vessel tonnage, railroad mileage and tonnage, etc., etc.

A UNIQUE DEPARTMENT

THE NEW CENSUS ATLAS OF THE WORLD contains a unique department entitled "FACTS ABOUT THE WORLD." This department shows the Principal Canals of the World and their Tonnage; Highest Mountains; Principal Seaports; Longest Rivers; Largest Lakes, Oceans and Cities; the Capitals of the World; Important Tunnels; Area of Islands; World's Strength in War Aeroplanes and Comparison of Aerial Navies; Manufactures of the United States; Chronological Outline of American History from 985 to 1911; Statistics of States; Statistics of the Cities; Government of the District of Columbia; Past Political Complexion of Various States; Party Lines in Congress since 1881; Order of Presidential Succession; Conservation of Lands and Forests; Forest Service; Principal Languages of the World; Comparative Prices of Commodities; How Wireless Telegraph Works; Recent Historical Events; Inventions and Inventors; Religious Divisions of Europe and the United States, etc.

THE NEW CENSUS ATLAS OF THE WORLD

contains 192 pages, printed on extra high-grade paper, bound in extra cloth with combination of blind stamping and inks. Size 11½x15 inches. Weight 56 ounces.

RACES ARE SURE AT ROCKINGHAM

Secretary Wilbur L. Duntley of Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., makes the announcement to-day that the report published from New York was absolutely wrong in regard to the application of his association for Grand Circuit dates to the stewards at the meeting held last Tuesday.

Through the solicitation of "Andy" Welch the dates asked in the circuit for Rockingham Park were awarded to New York, but there was no bargain that were New York to drop out that Rockingham could have two days of that week for a Grand Circuit meeting.

The truth of the matter was that the stewards voted to give New York fifteen days from January 9 to make good in holding a Grand Circuit meeting, and if on January 24 the promoters failed to come to time on promises made, then Rockingham Park would be declared a member of the Grand Circuit with the New York dates of August 19-24, the week preceding Readville.

Furthermore, Duntley declared that regardless of whether New York drops out in favor of Rockingham Park at the expiration of fifteen days, he is to issue a card of five days' racing to be held in conjunction with a mammoth fair.

Among the early closing stakes he will offer will be one for $10,000 for trotters, and a $3,000 event for pacers. One of the big futurity stakes will be secured, if possible, for the meeting. In all he calculated in hanging up between $40,000 and $50,000 in purses for the horsemen to contest for.

"I want the New England public and horsemen to know fully that Rockingham Park is on the racing map for keeps," concluded Mr. Duntley in his statement, "and if it comes to a question of having to buck one of the Grand Circuit meetings with our dates we intend offering the owners and trainers such flattering inducements to race with us, with a guarantee of getting their money, that the track we go against will well realize our strength.

"However, I'm of the opinion that New York will drop out, from what I have privately learned, which would do away with the distasteful proceedings of being compelled to conflict with any Grand Circuit tracks."

Greater Boston League—St. Mary's vs. St. Alphonsus at Roxbury; Lynn Y. M. C. A. vs. Cathedral Y. M. C. A. at Lynn.

CATHEDRAL IS BIG FAVORITE

Now that the St. Josephs, leaders of the Greater Boston Basketball League, have been defeated, the other teams are satisfied and basketball followers are sure that the league race will be closer than ever. Both the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. and the Quincy A. A. are close on the heels of the West End team, while the other fives, excepting the Father Mathew team, are not far behind.

Two contests will be decided to-night when the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. meets Lynn and the St. Mary's five plays the St. Alphonsus quintet at Roxbury. Excepting the Lynn Y. M. C. A., all other three teams played last night, but are in fit condition to make the games close and interesting.

Travelling up to its usual form, the Cathedral team should have very little trouble in disposing of the Lynn Y. M. C. A. However, the latter team will give the South End lads a stiff battle, and will have the big advantage of playing on its home court.

Playing on its home court, the St. Alphonsus five, should be able to give the St. Mary's five of the North End an even battle. The former team has improved wonderfully in the past two weeks, and the men are confident that they will be heard from before the season has gone much further.

The St. Mary's five promises to start a winning streak, and the date for the start is to-night. The men are anxious to get rid of the "jinx" that has been following them all season, and will go after to-night's game from the start.

HARVARD NINE TO START LATE

By TED PARKE.

Practice for the Harvard baseball nine will begin much later this year than last, according to the plans announced by Captain Potter, candidates not being called out for actual work in the baseball cage on Soldier's Field, until March 1.

Next Tuesday evening there will be a mass meeting for candidates for both the freshmen and varsity teams, and at that time, the plans will be outlined in detail by Captain Potter and Coach Sexton.

At the present time the course of action will be along these lines. Battery candidates for both varsity and freshmen teams will be called out to begin their chest weight exercises in the Gymnasium on January 25, this work to be continued until the men begin work in the cage.

This method was introduced last year by Coach Sexton, to get the throwing muscles of the battery men into good shape, and thus prevent much of the lameness and sore arms which have been prevalent in former years.

Pitchers Called February 12.

On February 12, the battery candidates will begin their twirling and catching in the cage. The fielding candidates for both nine, however, will not be asked to report until March 1.

A rather extended fall practice was held this year and as a result of this, Coach Sexton has been able to get a pretty good line on the men that will be available for the nine this Spring.

In view of this, only a certain number of men will be permitted to come out for the varsity, these men being notified by Captain Potter. Those who are not called out and who have the idea that they are varsity material, may try for the varsity only by receiving Captain Potter's permission.

This plan will be productive of good results for one good reason. In former years the men were called out indiscriminately and for the first two or three weeks, it was simply a process of weeding out.

Only One Position Open.

Under the present system, however, the men of known ability, and these are all known to the coach, will be started at work and the time formerly spent in the weeding process, may now be devoted to developing the men in the rudiments of the game; that is, actual knowledge can be started at once.

Thus the progress of the men may be faster from the very beginning, and the team will be in better shape when it goes out doors in the Spring.

Last year Coach Sexton had to call everyone out, for he did not know what he had to work with. After having spent a year with the men, however, he is well acquainted with his material and now need only devote himself to the development of them and so not call the team out until a week or so later.

The prospects of the team this year are far better than they have been for some time past, with practically only the first base position open, while Felton and Beebe, two of the best men in college, who, however, have not been eligible for the past two years, will be able to work for the team this Spring.

LAWRENCE NEAR NEW MARK IN HIGH JUMP

In a try out at the Hemenway gym. Samuel S. Lawrence, the graduate Harvard high jumper, came within a fraction of an inch of equalling the world's amateur record for a high jump. In the presence of Coach Quinn, and others, Lawrence cleared the bar on a pole vault standard at 6 feet 5 inches, showing an improvement even over the form displayed in the national championships at New York. Lawrence is in training for the many indoor games which are to be held this Winter. He will try to beat Sweeney's indoor record at the Boston Athletic Association's games to be held in Mechanics Hall Saturday, February 10.

Baseball Notes

It is probable that Derrell Pratt, the sensational young infielder secured by the St. Louis Browns from Montgomery in the Southern League, will be the regular second baseman of the Browns. Frank Laporte will go to the outfield.

Harry Wolverton, new manager of the New York Highlanders, could jump into the breach and play third base if necessary. Last season he played in 171 games with Oakland and held up his end both at the bat and in the defence.

Charley Hall, former Red and now on the roster of the Boston Red Sox, was the champion "stopper" of batting rallies in the American League last year. His extreme coolness and excellent control helped him in this respect.

In five years as manager of a minor league club, Harry Wolverton has never been at the head of a club which finished further down than third. Wonder if he can do that with the Highlanders?

"Hope springs eternal" in the breast of the man who runs a ball club. Jimmy McAleer is no exception. Jimmy is not thoroughly convinced, as is Frank Chance, of the Cubs, that the Athletics' supremacy has still a few years to run.

Spike Shannon, one-time Giant outfielder, is all through as a ballplayer. He was with Danny Shay in Kansas City last year, but his legs, once considered the finest pair in the National League, gave out. He is spending the Winter nights clerking in Shay's hotel out in Kansas.

American League writers think that Harry Wolverton made a serious mistake when he sent Catcher Blair to Rochester. The Highlanders have now but one first-class backstop, Sweeney, to rely on for the full season.

Tom Hughes, one of Clarke Griffith's best bets for the coming season, will be operated on. When he got into a fight with a fan in Chicago last Fall, he knocked one of his knuckles out of place, leaving one finger useless. This will now be mended.

Harry Howell was politely told the other day that if he would cut off a couple of his fingers he might become as good a pitcher as Mordecai Brown of the Cubs.

It will not be long before the fans will hear more about the real ball players. The ticket scandal and all other matters of a political nature never did make much of a hit with the fans. They like to read about the fellow in the uniform.

Minor leaguers are all hailing President Jacob J. Stein of the Buffalo club as the real person responsible for the formation of Class AA in baseball.

The St. Louis Browns are hot in the trail of a good catcher. Young Kritchell is willing and has a lot of pep, and Jimmy Stephens is good when not worked too often, but neither is of first-class calibre. Manager Wallace is willing to trade a good infielder for a backstop.

Detroit has six candidates for the third base job. With that army on hand it doesn't look like Hughey Jennigs is calculating on hanging on to George Moriarty very long.

BREAULT MAY SOON MEET ROBY ON MAT

SPENCER, Jan. 13.—Ulric Breault, the Southbridge wrestler, and Peter Roby, the Spencer lightweight, may soon be matched to meet on the mat. Breault has issued a challenge in which he has stated that he wants to meet Roby. Roby says that he is willing to meet Breault as he has some old scores to settle with him. Roby says: "I will meet Breault any time that he is ready, providing he is willing to back himself with a side bet. I would like to meet him in Ware. He recently wrestled in that town and advertised that he beat me. He has never beaten me and I would like to show the people of that town that I am the better wrestler."

BOSTON LATIN SCHOOL TRACK SCHEDULE

The Boston Latin School's track schedule for this Winter has been given out as follows:

Jan. 26, triangular meet, Brookline High, Boston Latin and Roxbury Latin at Boston Latin School; Feb. 2, Boston, Cambridge High and Latin School; Feb. 9, Dorchester High; Feb. 16, English High; Feb. 28 High School of Commerce; March 2, High School of Commerce and Boston Latin (intermediates).

MONTREAL TEAM BATTLES B. A. A.

THE LINEUP.

MONTREAL A. A. A.		B. A. A.

Meldon	c.	Winsor
Jackson	r.	Hicks
Fraser	l.w.	Leslie
Reed	c.p.	Heron
Stevens	p.	N. H. Foster
Finnie	g.	Canterbury

A great hockey game is on the card to-night at the Boston Arena when the B. A. A. team clashes with the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association seven. The Canadian team is about the best that has come to Boston for a game, and the Boston boys will have to show their full hands to win out.

The visitors are an old-established team and have victories to their credit over the best amateur teams of Canada. They play a fast, stiff game and rely on a lot of clever team work to get the puck into the cage. By playing together for several years the players have been able to develop a lot of team work and it is a revelation to see them work.

The Montreal team dickered a long time for this game, for they thought that they would surely defeat the Boston team that has been sending other Canadian teams back to Canada defeated. The men have been put through a lot of stiff practice in preparation for the game and all hands are prepared for the hardest kind of a fight.

The B. A. A. team will have its full strength on the ice and are ready to pull out a good victory. Captain Winsor is back on the team, and this means that the fans will see the Back Bay team at its best. The B. A. A. team puts up the same kind of a game that the Montreal players are reported strong, a fast game with a lot of team work. This fact should make the game one of the most exciting played in Boston this season.

Basketball Notes

Well, we've got to hand it to the Quincy A. A. This crack aggregation was the first team to defeat the St. Josephs, leaders of the Greater Boston League. The five is in third position, and promises to make a great fight for the lead before long.

The Dorchester All Collegiates issue a challenge to Notre Dame five of South Boston, who claim the championship of the State. Also Co. K of Hingham, Hyde Park, Gloucester, Attleboro, Weir's Temperance, Randolph, Clark five, South Framingham, Salem A. A., Co. D of Plymouth, Turners Falls, Newport, N. H., and West End A. A. Manager Charles B. Linnehan, No. 161 Blackstone street, city. Telephone 22313 Richmond.

Manager Frank W. Johnson of the Fenno five is waiting to hear from some of the fast teams of the State. He has a few open dates which he would like filled. He can be reached by writing Manager Frank W. Johnson, Mattapan.

The Marshall A. C. of Winthrop, 105-pound team, still has a few open dates and would like to hear from such teams as the Happy Newsboys, Somerville Boys' Club (for a game at Winthrop), St. John Berchman's, and the Ford Memorial, Y. M. C. A. Half expenses given or received. Manager, Henry L. Tonry, No. 146 Lincoln street, Winthrop.

The Sumner A. C. of Roxbury has a few open dates it would like to fill with any 115-pound teams in or around Greater Boston. Would like to hear from the Wood A. C. or Columbias of South Boston. Manager W. J. Glynn, No. 3 Church place, Roxbury.

The Tyler A. A. of Boston, weight 125-140, will meet any of the fastest teams in the State for a reasonable guarantee. Manager John Willard, No. 104 East Brookline street, city.

The Highland Adacemy five of Winthrop is on the floor with a new lineup, including O'Donnel, Dunham, Floyd, Smith and Green. Have open dates away from home Saturday nights in February and March. Chester O'Donnel, Highland avenue, Winthrop.

The Bennett A. A. of Somerville still has a few open dates and would like to meet any professional five. The lineup includes: Killiay and Redgate, formerly of the St. Francis; Dennehy, Greaves and "Bobber" Connolly, formerly of Dorchester High. Manager Frank Hutchins, No. 162 Glen street, Somerville.

LEWIS FIRST TO SIGN FOR 1912

Jack Lewis is the real speed boy in the contract signing line, holding first place in returning his document to President McAleer for another year at least with the Red Sox.

Lewis played second base last year with the Wheeling team of the Central League before coming to Boston, and in the twenty-two games with the Red Sox batted .296 and fielded the middle sack faultlessly.

McAleer expects Lewis to develop into a good man, and to make those players seeking his position go some to land the regular job.

It is also announced that President McAleer has practically closed the deal with Jersey City for Pitcher Bohet, turning over several good players for the young pitcher, including Roach, the seasoned shortstop who did so well for the New York Highlanders.

DAILEY'S PETS WIN HARD BOWLING MATCH

The Mahoneas A. C. bowling team of Charlestown met its first defeat of the season in a match game last evening, being defeated by Dailey's Pets, the pick of the Sullivan Square Alleys, by twenty-one pins. The unsportsmanlike conduct of the Pets and their followers was what defeated the popular Charlestown quintet, and the latter challenged to a return match at one of the Boston alleys. A return match was made, and the teams will roll on the Howard Alleys on January 26. The Pets hit the pins for a total of 1382, and the Mahoneas rolled for 1361. It was a close match from the first box, and but for the poor treatment that the losers received it would have been the finest match ever rolled at the alleys.

DEVLIN MAY PLAY HERE THIS YEAR

A strong rumor is afloat in baseball circles that Arthur Devlin, the clever little third baseman of the New York Giants, will be a member of the Pilgrims next season. The Boston fans know that the third bag is the weak spot of the Boston infield, and President Ward and Manager Kling have their eyes open to a good man to fill that position.

If Devlin is to come to Boston, it will be through a trade. Mattern is the principal of the trade as the rumor carries it, but as the president of the Pilgrims is on a business trip to New York nothing can be definitely stated till he is heard from.

The deal whereby Boston was to receive a third baseman started last year when the New York Giants asked waivers of Third Baseman Groh. All the teams in the league waived with the exception of Boston. Manager Tenney liked the player and refused to waive, but it was later settled between Tenney and Manager McGraw for the Boston club to waive and it is reported that the New York club promised to give the Boston team a third baseman this season. Tenney agreed to this and Groh went to Buffalo. Manager Stalling of the Bisons then turned over McDonald to the Boston team and he finished out the season with the Boston team at third base.

Whether Devlin would play a wonderful game for the Pilgrims is not known. It is the thought of many fans that he has seen his best days and that the days that he can play big league ball are numbered. It is thought, however, that the New Yorker could improve the base over the playing of McDonald, who is young and has many things in baseball to learn. Devlin is a good fielder and fair hitter and he might be good for the Pilgrims till another good man was secured.

In the case of Al Mattern it may be said that he is one of the best southpaws in the league and the Boston fans would not like to see him go. Al has been anxious to get away from Boston for the past few seasons and many teams would like to get hold of him. President Ward is working hard to build up a winning team so it is not thought that Mattern would be traded just for Devlin.

It may also be a possibility that Shaefer will be sent to Boston. He is a youngster who has been sitting on the bench for the past few seasons and many think him a clever third baseman.

TIGER SOPH BREAKS SWIMMING RECORD

PRINCETON, Jan. 13.—E. Cross, a sophomore at Princeton, broke the intercollegiate record for the 220-yard swim in a meet held in Brokaw pool. His time was 2 minutes 37 seconds, a second better than the former record.

BOSTON BOXER WINS.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Pat Rocco of Boston and Georgie Cohan of Albany fought ten rounds before the Oneida County A. A. Cohan proved a shifty boxer, but Rocco fought him all the way, and when he did land was more effective. Eddie Sarsnitt of Buffalo had the better of Young Riley in ten rounds, and Young Jack Johnson of Troy shaded Billy Sweeney of Shadwicks at the same distance.

The Manicure Lady

She Discusses Her Return to Work with the Head Barber

"WELL, George," said the Manicure Lady, "you can't keep a squirrel on the ground. I have come back to the shop again."

"I don't care whether you have came back or whether you have went," declared the Head Barber, who was plainly in a bad humor. "You ought to be here every day, and you know it. I know you are clever, and I know that you think you are pretty, but that ain't no sign that we have gotta all the time be putting on subs for you. Some of these days the old man will get sore and put on a girl that is more faithful."

"You make me tired," sniffed the Manicure Lady. "What do you suppose I care about you and the boss? Haven't I got at least two-thirds of my inheritance left? What do you suppose an heiress cares for a few barbers? Why, I could marry the boss if I would only say the word.

"Besides, George, I had to work hard for a number of years, and you know it. I want you to know that it ain't all honey for a girl to stick around a place like this and remove terra cotta from gents' nails."

A Little Off

"You don't mean 'terra cotta,' corrected the Head Barber, who never overlooked a chance to make the Manicure Lady miserable.

"Oh, well, then," snapped the Manicure Lady, "Terra del Fuego, or whatever they call it. I mean dirt. To illustrate what I mean, look at your own nails right this minute. Do you think it is a pleasant task for a girl like me, which can speak three different languages, to be around a barber shop making men's nails pink and telling them that they have hands like little babies when all the time their hands look like the hands of them hard-rock men you see going home nights in the surface cars with their drills and shovels? No, sir, George. As long as the bank roll lasts I am going to be an heiress and act with all the dignity with which a heiress is supposed to act with."

"It's none of my business," said the Head Barber, "but I only wanted to tell you that the old gent that runs this shop is getting sore. There's a lot of class to you, kid, and I hate to see a girl like you making way for some half-baked kid that doesn't know how to fix nails so that the customers will have to come back again the next week. You know what it says in the scriptures, 'Work for the night is coming.'"

She's Real Angry

"Thanks for the kindly interest, George," sneered the Manicure Lady. "I should think that a gent like you, with all your knowledge of how to get along in the world, would have got further up the ladder by now than to stand here handing out a lot of silly chatter to your customers and all the time honing razors. I wish you wouldn't be all the time honing razors, George. Some of them knives squeaks so that it gives me the Willies."

"You don't need to be changing the subject, kiddo," said the Head Barber. "I mean what I say. You can't get nowhere in this world witrout an effort. I had to work like a slave to fit myself for this job, and now I can meet gentlemen and talk the same as them. Nobody learned me good English—I had to work to get where I am."

"You ain't got nothing on me," said the Manicure Lady. "Nobody never learned me good English, either.

Bright Colors for Women

IN Paris we have a saying: "Nobody looks after a well-dressed man, but everybody looks after a well-dressed woman.

I do not think a woman's costume is a success if it does not attract attention, and I am much amused at the little grey women in Boston who seem to shrink from being seen.

The wear tailor made suits of plain colors, they search the stores for hats that will not be showy and won't attract attention, and with their pale faces they please men about as much as dummies in a shop window.

An attractive woman must be a peacock. Colors were made for women and women should not hesitate to make use of them. Of course one must use discrimination. There are some combinations of colors which are harmonious and others like yellow and red and green that are impossible.

A woman must wear colors, becoming colors. If her complexion will stand it she should not hesitate to wear a flaming red gown or one of bright orange. What I mean is that no color is too loud for a woman who has confidence in herself.

I have seen women afraid of the gowns they had on, timid and shrinking in garments which required pride and confidence. Of course they looked overdressed and vulgar.

The fascinating woman knows that no matter how attractive her clothes, a man's eye rests first upon her face. Other women will, of course, study her garments, but she doesn't care anything about other women.

My advice to women is that they must feel superior to their costumes. If a woman is sure that she would look well in rags she will carry the most gorgeous apparel in a stately and impressive manner. If she thinks she is unattractive and depends upon her clothes to make the effect, she is sure to make as much impression as one of those forms in the shop window built to show gowns, but with a wooden handle instead of a head.

Everything gets back to self-confidence, what some foolish people call vanity. I wear tailor-made suits because they give a person with a good figure a neat, trim look which is very appetizing. My tailor mades, however, are not in mannish colors and materials. I wear plush and velvet, silk and satin, as well as broadcloth, and several of my tailor mades are in bright colors.

An effective costume is like an advertisement in the newspaper. It calls attention to the advertiser. If she is pretty and fascinating, those who are attracted remain and can be made useful. That is how costumes help.

When I enter a room I expect the attention of every man in it, and every woman as well, and I am disappointed if I do not get it. There may be more beautiful women present, there usualy are, but I have so dressed and toileted and prepared myself that my good points shine and things that I am not so proud of are not noticed.

So my advice to-day is, do not fear colors, they were invented for women, but use them intelligently and with good taste. Remember always that they should be like the frame of the picture and your face and figure are always the picture.

Rules for Guests.

DAYSEY MAYME APPLETON having spent nine-tenths of her life in visiting, realizes how much there is to cause discomfort to a guest. She has had printed and framed a set of Rules for Guests similar to those hung in hotel bed rooms:

1. Don't bow the head at meals as if expecting grace. We don't ask it unless the preacher is present, and a guest's expectance of a religious observance that isn't forthcoming is embarrassing to the family.

2. Make yourself at home, but don't expect us to treat you like one of the family; we want to retain your friendship.

3. Pay no heed to your host or his sons. Men folks around this house don't count; they just fit in.

4. Take your toothbrush with you when you depart. Otherwise we may be compelled to make portieres of the toothbrushes left by departing guests at the rate at which they are accumulating.

5. When a young man calls on the daughter of your hostess, it is your duty to find you are wanted in some other part of the house.

6. If you are a young woman, respect the Hands Off signs on the young man who comes regularly.

7. All visits due the hostess and her daughter collected promptly. If desired one of them will go back with you.

8. Always quarrel violently with your hostess over who shall pay the car fare and succumb gracefully after a heated argument to her stronger will, and let her pay it. She expects to, and has counted that in as a part of the cost of having you here.

9. If you are a very, very dear friend of the hostess, help her with the work, and don't expect any extra cooking. It is her privilege to put on the extra frills only for those who are not her very dear friends.

10. The printed slips attached showing the high cost of entertaining a guest are for free distribution. Help yourself.

A Long Way Off

THE story goes that a well-known politician once began to grow a mustache and while it was still in the budding stage he was asked at a dinner party to take in to dinner a girl who had decidedly opposite political views.

"I am sorry," said the politician, "we cannot agree on politics."

"No, we can't," rejoined the girl, "for to be frank with you, I like your politics about as little as I do your mustache."

"Well," replied the other caustically, "remember that you are not really likely to come into contact with either."

English HairGrower

American rights secured for New Drug CRYSTOLIS

Grows Hair an Inch Long in 30 Days—Stops Falling Hair, Dandruff and Itching Scalp—Restores Gray and Faded Hair to Natural Color and Brilliancy.

CUT OFF FREE COUPON AND MAIL TODAY

Here's good news for the man who vainly tries to plaster a few scanty locks over "that bald spot."

Good news for the woman whose hair is falling, whose locks are too scanty to properly pin up her false hair.

Good news for both men and women who find a handful of hair in their combs every morning, or men and women growing gray before their time.

Good news for all with itching, burning scalps, with dandruff, with any and all forms of hair and scalp trouble.

The Creslo Laboratories, 138A 8th Ave., Binghamton, N. Y., have secured the exclusive American rights for Crystolis, the famous English hair treatment.

Crystolis is a household word in Europe, where it is acclaimed "the most marvelous scientific discovery for promoting hair growth." It has won gold medals at Paris and Brussels.

Better yet, it has won the warmest words of praise from those who have been fortunate enough to test its remarkable qualities.

Crystolis has been tried out in America for over a year now. Hundreds of men and women from every State unhesitatingly hail it as the true hair grower.

Here is a statement of just a few of those who have tried—who have been convinced—and who will swear to the virtues of this marvelous preparation:

Mr. Kelly, of Memphis, bald for thirty years, says: "My head is now covered with hair nearly an inch long; friends simply astounded."

Mrs. Evans, of Chicago, writes: "Since using Crystolis can report new hair an inch long coming in thickly all over my head."

Mr. Macklain, of St. Louis, reports: "One treatment made my hair two inches longer."

Mr. Morse, of Boston, declares: "I lost my hair eighteen years ago. Have used less than one treatment. My head is now entirely covered with a thick growth of hair of natural color. No more itching, no more falling hair, no more dandruff."

Mr. Boyd, of Chicago, says: "My bald spot was as shiny as a peeled onion. It is now all covered with thick, new hair. The grayness is also disappearing."

Mr. Mourer, of Cleveland, declares: "Crystolis is the only thing which actually grows hair."

Mrs. Morris, of Philadelphia, writes, after only three weeks' use: "I can see new hair in plenty, and it is now a half-inch long."

Lewis Neff says: "New hair began to grow in ten days after beginning the treatment."

Mrs. Clarkson, of New York, writes: "My hair stopped falling the first week. No more itching scalp and new hair coming in fast."

Mr. Arnott, of Cleveland, reports: "Itching scalp stopped the second day. Dandruff gone; no more falling hair."

Mrs. Rose, of Rock Island, writes: "Was almost wild for five years with itching scalp. Two or three applications of Crystolis stopped this. Now I have a fine new growth of hair."

You may be acquainted with some of these people, or some of your friends may know them. Write us and we can give you the full address, so that you can prove every statement.

But the best way to prove, without the risk of a penny, just what Crystolis will do in your own individual case, is to cut out the free coupon below and mail it to-day.

This invitation is open to bald-headed people, wig wearers, to men and women with falling hair, prematurely gray hair, dry hair, brittle hair, stringy hair, greasy hair, matted hair, dandruff, itching scalp or any and all forms of scalp and hair trouble. Don't lay this paper aside until you have mailed the Free Coupon to the Creslo Laboratories, 138A 8th Ave., Binghamton, N. Y. Write your name and address plainly.

The Dangrange Church Mystery

To-day's Complete Short Story

"IT is a painful case," the little gentleman in the orthodox black coat and plain collar said, glancing pathetically at Blake; "but what am I to do?"

Blake nodded his head.

"Yours is a difficult position, Mr. Maclean," he returned. "I suppose that there is no chance of a mistake having been made?"

The Scots minister shook his head. Blake glanced again at the notes on his desk.

"To go over the case once more," he continued. "Sir Malcolm told you last week that, for the past month, he has been in the habit of dropping a new sovereign in the plate which is handed round during your morning service. Yet you say that during that time there has never been a sovereign counted with the offering?"

"That is so," Blake's visitor agreed.

"And last Sunday, at your request, your wife particularly noted the taking of the collection, and she saw Sir Malcolm place a sovereign on the plate?"

"Yes."

"Yet after the service, when the collection was counted in the vestry, the gold coin had vanished?"

"Quite so."

Blake leaned back in his chair.

"Your method of taking a collection differs from the Church of England," he said. "Might I ask you what happens after the offering has been collected?"

"The plates are taken to the vestry, and the collection is counted after the service."

"Now, tell me—who are responsible for the collecting of the offering?"

The minister hesitated for a moment.

"I cannot think that they are guilty, Mr. Blake," he said. "I have known John Gavin for twenty years, and his nephew, Donald Fane, is as fine a lad as ever stepped."

"How old is Donald Fane?"

"Twenty-two," said Mr. Maclean; "and a bright, manly young man he is. A little impetuous, perhaps—youth maun be served, you know, Mr. Blake—but I have always felt that, under his wild exterior lies a heart of gold."

"No One Knows"

"Apart from Mrs. Maclean, no one knows what is taking place, I suppose?"

"Not a soul," said the little minister, sadly. "It's no' the kind o' thing that I—I would care to publish to the world."

"You see, Mr. Blake," he explained, "we are practically strangers in a strange land. Dangrange is an English town, and some of the lower order rather resent the presence of us 'chapel-goers,' as they are pleased to call us."

"I quite understand," the detective returned.

The minister leaned forward.

"You will help me?" he said, inquiringly. "I realize that in many ways the case is not very important from a professional standpoint. But the worry of the thing is beginning to tell on me, and I must have it cleared up."

"Yes," said the detective, "I will help you."

And he was as good as his word. Saturday afternoon found him quietly strolling through the peaceful suburb outside Dangrange, en route for the chapel. He found it at last on the outskirts of the suburb, a brave little pile of Aberdeen granite, standing in a quiet cemetery. There were a few soberly-garbed individuals strolling along the paths, and here and there a figure bending over a mound of earth told that death had already commenced to claim its toll.

Blake sauntered slowly around the square building, and examined a small window, which he knew from the description supplied by his client, to be that which lighted the vestry.

It was some ten feet above the ground level, and was not much more than a foot wide by three high. The top portion was made to swing inwards on a curved support, leaving a gap about five or six inches wide, through which the interior might be ventilated.

"That effectively disposes of the outside agency idea," the detective muttered, eyeing the window carefully. "The frame is mortised, and"——

His quick eye caught sight of something fixed in the corner of the top portion, just where the flange of the ventilating cap rested on the wooden frame. It was too far away for him to reach it unless he ventured to climb up to the sill. The sight of a casual stranger climbing the wall of their church would soon arouse the suspicions of the sober people of the cemetery.

Asked to See Church

As he turned away from the window, he glanced about him. Beyond the wall of the cemetery he saw a low white roof shining in the sun. A line of tall bean poles told him that the garden attached to the little cottage ran down beside the church, with only a narrow pathway between the boundaries.

"I expect that this is where Hamley stays," Blake thought, remembering the name of the man whom Mr. Maclean had said was caretaker of the church and grounds. "A good idea. I'll visit him. I want to see the interior of the vestry, and he might save me a journey."

The minister had armed Blake with a letter of introduction to Hamley. When Blake knocked on the door of the cottage it was a raw-boned, freckled-face youth who answered the summons.

"Feyther bean't in now," the youth said, eyeing the quietly dressed stranger with eager eyes, "but if there be anything Oi can do fur ee——"

"I wanted to see the interior of the church," Blake said. "Mr. Maclean sent me to Mr. Hamley."

It was the tip which usually accompanies such tours of inspection which made the hobbledehoy so eager. He shot into the interior of the cottage, leaving the door ajar. The detective glanced into the cosy interior. A huge wicker cage was suspended in front of one of the low windows, and through the willow bars Blake saw a sharp, beady eye fixed on him. The glossy plumage and sleek head was recognized at once.

"There aren't many jackdaws about here, are there?" the detective asked, as his guide reappeared, swinging a bunch of keys.

"Oh, ye-es there is, hunners ov 'daws," the youth returned, with a curious note of hesitancy in his voice. "They—they be ver' common in these 'ere parts."

"Oi suppose it be the winders you be wantin' to zee?" the guide suggested. "Fowk coom all the way fra Lunnon to see 'un. They du saay as how they be the best about these parts."

Eyed Each Window

Blake strolled down the gloomy interior, eyeing each window as he passed. At last he reached the small door, set in the high oak panelling on the right of the steps leading to the high pulpit.

He stepped up to the door and turned the brass knob. It gave to his pressure, and he opened the door to find himself in the vestry.

"There—there be nothing in theer, zur," the lanky guide began; "feyther usu'lly keeps it locked up. Oi must tell him about it."

His visitor seemed to have developed a sudden deafness. He stepped into the centre of the octagonal-shaped room and glanced around him slowly.

A couple of high-backed chairs stood close to the table, and a third chair stood against the wall, immediately below the window.

"Not much light here, is there?" Blake said, crossing the floor. "Hardly enough to sign a register by."

His guide did not move from the doorway.

"Oi—Oi bean't supposed to allow 'ee to come in here," he said in a vexed voice; "it's been put straight for the service in the marnin'. Feyther 'ull be main cross if he hears about it."

"Oh, we won't disturb anything!" the detective assured him, with unruffled composure. "I always like to see everything when I'm about it."

He was close to the chair beneath the window now, and he bent forward, pretending to examine the carved back. But his eyes were on the leather seat, and he saw the print of a boot—a heavy, nail-studded article—outlined against the smooth grain.

"Badly ventilated place," Blake said aloud. "That window ought to be twice as large."

He stepped back and glanced up at the narrow frame. The brass arm which operated the movable portion was worked by a long cord. Blake caught at the loose end of the cord and tugged it sharply—the brass arm was wedged and resisted his efforts.

He heard a step by his side and turned round. The yokel was close to him, and his small eyes were full of a smouldering rage.

"These things always do stick and get out of order," the detective said, "dropping the cord and turning away. "If it rains to-night your father will have a job to clear up after."

He strolled toward the door, and his guide stepped aside to allow him to pass. A smothered sigh of relief sounded as the door was closed behind them. Blake heard a key turn in the lock, and glanced round. The youth was slipping a short-stemmed key back into his pocket.

"Humph! Feyther usually keeps it locked, does he?" Blake muttered to himself. "That is the number one, my friend. You're been in there since your father left it, I'll swear."

At 6 o'clock Blake presented himself at the home of his reverend client, and was introduced to the lady of the house. They had only time to exchange a few remarks before retiring to dress for dinner; but when they met at the table again, Blake began his questioning.

"I could not find Hamley," he said; "he was not at home."

"No, I am very sorry," the minister returned; "he told me this morning that he had to go away. You saw the church, however, I suppose?"

"Yes, thanks," the detective returned. "A lad did the honors for me—he said he was Hamley's son."

"You seem to have a large feathered congregation here," he remarked. "I thought I saw a number of jackdaws as I came along."

Maclean laughed.

"Then your city eyes deceived you," he returned; "they were crows or rooks, probably. We have finches and sparrows in galore, but master Jackdaw is conspicuous by his absence."

The murmur of voices from the little kirk came like the droning hum of a hive to the ears of Blake, as he lounged at full length behind the wall of the cemetery. The organ began to roll its smooth notes and Blake glanced at his watch. The collection was now being taken. Ten minutes passed and again the hum of voices arose. Then—close behind him, he heard a creak—the sharp, sibilant sound of willow rasping on willow.

Flick!

A black shadow slid across the sunlit ground, and on the ledge beneath the ventilating gap Blake saw the black, shining body of the jackdaw poise for a moment. It looked to right or left with that sharp, turning movement of head and neck so characteristic of the breed—king thief of all the feathered world!

The scrape of a heavy boot against the other side of the wall made the detective duck his head swiftly, but not before he had seen the jackdaw, with one straight dive, vanish into the interior of the vestry.

"Exit Donald Fane, with all apologies," Blake mutered grimly. "And—enter George, the most obliging and attentive."

Noiselessly Blake raised himself until his head was above the wall. Then, leaning on his arms, he watched a very interesting struggle.

Wedged between the strong beak was a gold coin, and George, kneeling on the ground, was tugging violently at the glittering thing. The jackdaw, although handicapped in size and strength, was putting up a fair fight. It was evident that it was no willing accomplice.

At the unexpected sound the lout looked up, and a hoarse cry of fear broke from his lips. The 'daw, released from its master's choking grip, dropped on the ground and scurried off down the narrow pathway, its golden prize still wedged in its beak.

Blake placed his hand on the wall and vaulted over it. Then he gripped the collar of the terrified lout and dragged him to his feet.

"Oi—oi didn't mean to do it, zur!" the fellow blented, his knees knocking together with fear. "It—it wur Kirk, the 'daw, as did it fust. Feyther found 'im near the chapel, and we allus calls 'im 'Kirk,' like they calls the chapel. Kirk was allus fond o' bright things, and I found a suverin in its cage one Sunday. After that Oi"——

"Assisted in its search for bright things, you rogue," the detective returned. "Cleared its path for it, and robbed it of its spoil. Yes, and almost had the burden of your guilt cast on another. But your game is up, Master George, and you will have to pay the penalty."

Not An Expert

AT an exhibition of thoroughbreds recently, King George was observed engaged in animated conversation with a young lady who, if nervous, was exceedingly pretty—though she was also exceedingly innocent as regards thoroughbreds.

"Are you a good judge of horseflesh?" inquired the King.

"Oh, Your Majesty," stammered the young lady confusedly—I'm afraid I don't know. I should say not. I never really—er—tasted any!"

WHAT'S THIS - A MESSAGE TO THE ITALIAN CAMP. LOOKS LIKE CLAUDE'S WRITING. I MUST SAVE THE LOVERS!
THE ITALIANS HAVE ARRIVED IN TIME AND THE VILLAIN DESMOND IS CAPTURED. WE ARE SAVED
CURSES! I'M FOILED BUT YOU DARE NOT KILL ME!
SAVED
HERSHFIELD

Desmond, the most cruel-hearted villain in all that land of cruelty, gloats over the entombment of Claude, hero, and Rosamond, proud beauty, in the cone of sand which he had thrown over them with the Tripoli street-sweeping machine. Little does he wot that a team of desert ants is dragging a message for help across the sands on the other side of the cone. It is Claude's scheme to summon the trusty Italians.

Desmond himself realizes that it is time he sent a message for aid to his Turkish fellow scoundrels. Accordingly, he fastens his letter to a carrier pigeon which has been trained to fly direct to Turkish headquarters. No matter what the General may be doing, his orders from the Sultan are that he must instantly respond to any appeal for help that may come from Desmond Pasha, the famous international crook.

SPEED

TENACITY.

Ah, ha! The carrier pigeon, speeding at fifty miles an hour with Desmond's message to the Turks, shoots right into a box kite, used for advertising, because it can be seen so far on the level desert. The race, as you may have heard before, is not always to the swift—but at the same time most people prefer to have their little wager on the swiftest horse in the race. However, we see the meteor-like pigeon ending its race here.

In the meantime the ants, which progress but slowly, have stuck to their pilgrimage, and the attention of the Italian General is attracted to the message they are dragging over the sand. Thus we see that tenacity has triumphed over speed, and the old saw about the race not being always to the swift has come true once more. When an ant starts going it keeps right on, even if it knows whether it is going or not.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and you dare not kill me!" So he cries to the Italian General, who has come to rescue Claude and Rosamond from their living tomb and incidentally to execute the criminal Desmond, who is outlawed by all civilized nations. We suppose Rosamond will have a terrible time getting the sand out of her hair, but anyway Monday we shall learn Desmond's fate.

Do You Know That—

A new form of entertainment, started by Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, is being taken up by Newport hostesses. It is a dinner and dance, with the dancing between the courses. As soon as one course is finished the orchestra strikes up, and the guests leave their places and begin to dance. The dance finished, another course is served. Eating and dancing go on in this way until the dinner is finished. By the time coffee is served the dinner ball has lasted two hours.

"I HAD almost forgotten," he said to the manager. "I have a collection of pearls that it has taken me fifteen years to get together. I wish you would come up to the hotel to-night and get them. I want them made into a necklace for my fiancee."

Then they were back in to the motor and away to the finest modiste the Avenue afforded. There Stafford established unlimited credit for Virginia. They went to all the fine shops and the same thing was done in each.

A Bank Account for Her.

Finally they went to one of Stafford's banks, and Virginia was made to sign her name and was then presented with a tiny vellum-covered checkbook.

"In getting your trousseau, dear," he told her, "you can pay with checks or have the bills charged, just as you wish. Now promise me that you will not try to be economical. I have more money than the two of us could spend if we lived five lifetimes."

He stole a kiss from her lips as they passed out of the bank.

Stafford's veins bounded with red blood stirred into quick movement by love for the girl beside and the very joy of living.

"You've never been aboard my yacht," he said, as he again took the wheel of his machine. "She is a beauty and is anchored in the Hudson off Forty-second street. We will go by the school for Fanny and take her along as a chaperon for you."

"But she has on her school clothes," protested Virginia.

"She will be all the more comfortable and will have all the better time," he said. "We will have lunch as we speed up the Hudson. I'll have a larger car and faster one ready for us at Tarrytown and we'll drive back in the moonlight."

They took Fanny away from school and went across town to the foot of Forty-second street.

"If Jimmie could only see me on the yacht," sighed Fanny.

"Not a bad idea," cried Stafford, with a laugh. "Then all the little family will be happy. I'll have the captain take the yacht down stream and we'll send ashore for Jimmie, get him from his grocery shop and maybe we'll settle up about his new job in my office."

A half an hour later, when Jimmie received a telephone message to hurry to a downtown pier and board Mr. Stafford's yacht, that young man went to Mr. Kittles, resigned his job as third assistant shipping clerk and rushed forth with twinkling legs and a brain that fairly surged with ideas.

When She Learned to Love

STAFFORD was for having Virginia and Fanny take an apartment on Fifth avenue, but Virginia opposed this.

"As soon as Jimmie is settled in his place at your office," she told him, "I want them to be married and take this same little flat until they are well settled and know their minds. There is plenty of time before them. They are mere children. I don't want their heads turned."

He saw the good sense of this, and, during the time of making the trousseaux of the two girls, he was a frequent guest at the cozy little home the two working girls had built for themselves.

As the day approached for the double wedding the three pretty little rooms seemed to gather decided charm for Virginia. The windows looked brighter and prettier. Every nook and corner, clean and sweet, seemed to remind her of an independence that she and Fanny had builded for themselves.

Here, at least, was their own domain. This place they had achieved by their work and their care. It was, in verity, a home. Stafford's palatial apartments, his splendid yacht, his silver and tapestry and bronzes were—Stafford's. He had earned them.

On the other hand, Virginia and Fanny, by honest toil and happy effort, had built them this little home nest. Everything in it represented a moment's work with their minds and hands. There was a wide chasm between the positions in life of the two. Virginia had a faint, vague realization of it.

Feared For Ring.

The engagement ring he had bought for her began to assume the proportions of a white elephant. It seemed to Virginia that every man, woman and child on the street noticed it and pointed it out.

She became afraid of some ruffian attacking her and robbing her of it. The diamond was superb, and she lived among people who could not boast such beauty of ornament.

On Fanny's practical advice, she did not wear the ring in the daytime, save when Stafford came. She hid it under the mattress.

The cares and worries of wealth were already fastening upon her.

Mrs. Boykin, the kindly landlady, did all in her power to give aid and advice to the two girls, but there were other lodgers in the house, and every time there came a package from some Fifth avenue establishment for Virginia or for Fanny, curiosity was aroused and the news spread to adjoining houses that the two girls on the third floor of the Boykin house were wallowing in wealth.

Stafford heaped gifts upon them.

In most reckless fashion he sent Virginia his pearl necklace, made up by the famous Fifth avenue jeweller, just as if it was a nosegay of field flowers. To Fanny he sent gold and silver sets, silks and satins, and every day one of his machines, that she and Jimmie might take a spin.

Stafford was as a boy run wild with the joy of giving, an abundant treasure in his grasp. He would not even tolerate Virginia going to milliner or mantua maker. They were sent to her—in his automobiles. The little flat heaped high with beautiful things and the day approached when Stafford would take Virginia away from her little home forever, and Jimmie and Fanny would go away with the gayety and confidence of youth, to start life once more, and, seriously, as man and wife.

Vague Fears of the Future.

The average girl of the shops would have been wild with rhapsodic delight over the change. But the average working girl would not have had this chance that was Virginia's. She was far and away above the average—a serious minded, true girl. She looked into the future with wondering eyes and with a semblance of fear in her heart; for she knew not what it would bring forth.

Robert Stafford was as fine a lover as ever a woman had. There was nothing to him that rang false. He was so powerful, as a man, and so entrenched with his gathered riches that he could afford to defy all the social conventions by marrying a telephone girl.

"If we are snubbed and find ourselves in need of friends," he told Virginia, "we shall not care. The people who snub us we will be well rid of. When Virginia Blaine becomes Virginia Stafford she will have the lever to all success and worthy attainment, the mind and heart of a good woman, and all the money she may desire."

Jimmie and Fanny were off in one of his automobiles and Robert and Virginia sat together in the little flat.

"Virginia, my sweetheart," he said, softly, "money is far from being everything in the world. I could start out penniless with your love and help and achieve happiness before my time comes to die. But you will have all my fortune to do with as you please, and if we must face barriers we will break them down together. I want the pick of the men and the women of this city to bow down to you for your goodness."

Her Lips to His.

The sentiment he had uttered was so fine that Virginia felt that upon it alone she could love this man who came to her offering his great wealth and his great heart.

She drew his head toward her and put her lips to his.

"I believe you are right," she said. "Love grows better and stronger in the soil of respect. It is not a momentary passion. It is not the mere fact of a man and a woman being together. It is a thing that comes to those who find in each other and who feel for each other the thing you call respect."

"My sweetheart!" he cried. "You have been taught to love me."

She kissed him again and again.

The Marriage.

WINTER had started in the North when the great day of days for Virginia and Stafford came.

The air was crisp and cold and the city was bathed in sunlight, as if Nature were offering them an augury of their future brightness of life.

James Gilley, Esq., and Fanny Blaine were to be married in the afternoon, at the home of a minister nearby. Stafford and Virginia were to be made man and wife immediately thereafter. Then the younger couple would start away and, during the evening, Stafford and his bride would go their way for the honeymoon.

That day Mr. Gilley was up at the coming of dawn. He was to say good-by forever to his stuffy boarding house. Fortune had not only smiled on him, but had beamed upon him. His room in the boarding house was fairly cluttered with dazzling raiment. He would be married in a Prince Albert, the conventional gray striped trousers, gloves and patent leathers.

Mr. Gilley had also advanced so far in fashion that in one of his grips was stowed away an English walking suit. There was still another, a business suit, nobbily cut and bearing the name of a Fifth avenue tailor. And there were scarfs and scarf pins enough to have made a matinee idol envious.

Fanny Blossoms Out.

Jimmie and Fanny, as a part of their wedding gifts, were to have a trip to Florida on one of the most luxurious of the through trains from New York, a stateroom to themselves and rooms in the swellest hotel at Palm Beach. Even at $50 a week, the salary paid him now, he could not very well afford all of this, so Stafford had given him a check to cover all his expenses.

Fanny, who had been just a pretty shopgirl, blossomed out beautifully in the finest of gowns and hats and she knew how to wear fine things, too. Few men could pass her on the avenue without turning for a second glance. With Mr. Gilley affecting a bored air and twirling a silver-tipped cane, they made a couple "worth while," as Jimmie observed frequently.

Jimmie did not take his noonday meal at the boarding house. When the last of his luggage had been shipped away to the Pennsylvania station, he showed himself in all his glory to the wondering boarders, told them good-by, wished them good luck, settled his bill with the landlady, and went for Fanny, to take her to lunch on the avenue—not Sixth or Eighth avenue, but the only avenue—Fifth.

'Hallon, Lushington!" shouted Barnes; "how are you, old man? Come and have a drink."

"No, thanks," returned Lushington; "I've sworn off for three months."

'Have you, indeed?' said Barnes. "Bravo, that capital! We must have a drink on the strength of it. What will you have?"

"Little drop of Scotch, please," said Lushington from sheer force of habit.

COUNTRY WILD OVER REAL HAIR GROWER

True Method Discovered at Last

$100.00 Reward if They Fail—Read Guarantee.

That the American people are very quick to recognize an article of real merit is proven by the rapidly increasing demand for Radizene, a remarkable new treatment for the hair which has recently been discovered. While this new treatment for baldness, dandruff, grey hair, falling hair, itching scalp, etc., is remarkably simple, it is a fact that nothing like it has ever been placed on the market before, although it can readily be seen by the treatment that this is the only safe and sane, common sense treatment, and that success must follow in an astonishingly short space of time.

The proprietors of this remarkable treatment realize the fact that the public has had so much unsatisfactory experience with worthless treatments that a preparation of real merit is likely to be classed as a simple "hair tonic," and after giving the Radizene treatment a severe test in some of the worst cases of baldness, dandruff, falling hair, grayness, itching scalp, they guarantee satisfactory results or money back.

Upon receiving the coupon below, the Radizene Laboratory will send their guarantee, which tells all about the $100.00 reward, to all readers of the Boston American, together with full, free information regarding the new treatment. Don't send any money, for particulars are free. Simply cut out and send in the coupon below, and you will receive by return mail full particulars regarding this remarkable discovery.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK MARKET CLOSED WEAK

STATE STREET, Jan. 13—Closing—The Boston market closed rather weak after a session in which coppers were a fluctuating feature. Amalgamated closed at 65, off ⅝; American Telephone closed at 140, ⅞ and unchanged; Mayflower sold down to 7¼, a decline of ⅝; Old Colony closed at 5¼, off ¼; Superior Boston closed at 4½, a sag of ⅛; United Fruit closed at 185, off ½ and Hancock at 33½, a gain of ⅝ for the day.

There was a slight decline in price for the most of the roads featured to-day in the New York trading. Canadian Pacific had more than a fractional slump, leading the downward movement. It closed at 228½, off 2¼ points. There was no definite explanation of the pressure against it given on the floor.

Lehigh Valley closed at 184, unchanged; Northern Pacific at 115½, off ⅝; Union Pacific 167¼, off ⅝; St. Paul 107¼, off ⅞; Baltimore & Ohio 103½, off ⅜.

Among other stocks that declined were American Smelters, which closed at 70⅝, off ⅛; Steel 66, off ⅞, and Utah Copper 66, off ⅜.

Trading was moderately active at the opening on the Boston Exchange, with the tone of most of the coppers firm, and with interest centering in Hancock, which sold at 34⅜, an advance of 1⅝.

New York Closes Steady.

The New York market was strong. But it eased off after the first fifteen minutes of trading. Reading, after its strong opening, declined over a point. Steel common reacted to yesterday's close. Lehigh made a moderate advance and then yielded. It was believed that earlier buying consisted mostly of coverin gby board room shorts. Some of the specialties were strong. Pacific Mail went up a point and Consolidated Gas advanced 2 points.

At the end of the first hour most of the active issues showed loses ranging from frtcions to 1½ points below early figures. The market closed steady. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady. Sterling exchange 4.84½ to 4.88. Bankers' bills 4.8605 to 4.87; and 4.8365 to 486¾ for 60-day bills. Prime mere paper nothing said.

Tone in London Mainly Firm.

There was no much doing in the London market to-day and the attendance at the exchange was small. Gilt-edged investments were stronger, and there was more strength in home rails because of faith that labor troubles would be averted by the Conciliation Board, which holds its meeting on January 23.

Americans ruled higher, the sentiment towards them being much more favorable. The proposed rate investigation in western Canada had a depressing effect upon Canadian Pacific. There was not much movement in foreign securities.

The continental bourses were quiet at the close.

BOSTON MUSIC TRADE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Burton R. Miller, treasurer of the Henry F. Miller & Sons Piano Company, was to-day elected president of the Boston Music Trade Association at the annual meeting in Lombardy Inn. Other officers elected were: E. A. Cressey, secretary; M. P. Campbell, treasurer. Mr. Cressey is connected with the C. C. Harvey Piano Company. Mr. Campbell for many years has been general manager and New England sales agent of the Ivers & Pond Piano Company.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The Bell Telephone System of the United States reports gross earnings of $163,686,329 for the eleven months in 1911 ending November 30. The gross earnings for the previous corresponding period were $150,244,013. The total expenses for the 1911 period were $116,720,188, an increase of $12,472,409 over eleven months in 1910. The surplus earnings for the eleven months of 1911 were $10,827,805, against $12,389,284 for the same period in the previous year. The report says: "The unexpended portion of the provision made for depreciation for the first eleven months of 1911 was $15,558,044, which is not counted as profits, but remains as a reserve for future replacement." This system includes the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and associated holding and operating companies in this country, but not connected independent nor sub-licensing companies.

It is announced that the directors of the Contact Copper Co. have voted the right to exchange Elm River Copper Company stock for shares of the Contact Copper Company be reopened, on condition that interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from July 1, 1910, be paid on the cash payment required to cover subscription for additional shares. This offer will remain in force until the close of business January 31 next.

It is calculated that if the domestic consumption of copper continues throughout 1912 on the average rate of the last three months, that the total for the year will exceed that of the last one by almost 100,000,000 pounds. But increased production on a big scale is also looked for. The world's present visible supply is estimated at being in the vicinity of 250,000,000 pounds. This amount is worth $5,000,000 more than it was three months ago, when the price was 12½ cents a pound.

The cold snap has interfered seriously with the handling of Western farm products. There are millions of bushels of corn on side-tracks in the great belt which cannot be moved to market for lack of available locomotives. Railways can do little to reduce the accumulation until the weather is milder.

It is said that the bargain hunters are now nosing around Wall Street, but not buying much as yet, as they expect that prices will decline further.

Now that the Lehigh melon is out of the way, the Street is beginning to imagine things in connection with Reading. If Reading cuts a melon, it will be something worth talking about, for the company has concealed assets worth from $100 to $300 a share. Some idea of what might happen if the Reading directors began discussing a segregation of assets was seen in the advance of 14½ points on a few transactions in Central of New Jersey. It is thoroughly understood that the ownership of Central of New Jersey by the Reading is illegal, and that the stock must be distributed sooner or later. The coal company owned by Reading would make a second distribution, so that the speculative possibilities are by no means exhausted.

SHERIFFS IN PLANES HUNT FOR FUGITIVES

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—Four aviators, sworn in as deputy sheriffs, are flying over the mountain country around Calabasas to-day in search of the two men who wounded a deputy sheriff in a fight at San Fernando, Wednesday, and escaped.

WHY ARE WOMEN CONTINUALLY GETTING US INTO TROUBLE? Suggested by the latest escapade of "Jimmy," who ought to have tended the baby but who was lured away by a charmer. See the comic section of the Sunday AMERICAN for all the shocking details

MANY ENTRIES IN BIG ICE CARNIVAL

Entries are coming in for the skating races which will be a feature of the AMERICAN'S great Ice Carnival next Saturday afternoon, January 20.

This Carnival will be held on the Charles River Basin, whose waters are now safely locked in solid ice.

The Carnival is not alone for Greater Boston. It is for all New England. It is the intention of the AMERICAN to make this the greatest Ice Carnival the East ever saw.

The public became interested in the Carnival prospect from the moment the first announcement was made. Many questions were asked about the events which were to form the Carnival card.

Race List Announced.

The racing events have been announced. They will be divided into two clases, championship for men and open-for-all.

The championship events for men will include:

Quarter-mile dash.
Two-mile race.
Five-mile race.

These three events leave ample choice for skaters of all distances, from dash to endurance.

But, in order that the younger element, especially the school boys and girls of Boston and New England, may share in the contests, the Ice Carnival Editor includes three open-for-all events on the racing card.

These will be:

Half-mile race for boys, eighteen or under.
Quarter-mile race for boys twelve or under.
Half-mile race for girls.

Chance for Both Big and Small.

This series is planned to give both the big boys and the little fellows a show, also to include the girls. It would be a shame to leave out the girls. They are splendid skaters. As a matter of fact, they are infinitely more graceful than boys are on skates.

A race by girls on skates is one of the prettiest events imaginable. If you don't believe it, come to the Carnival next Saturday afternoon and see for yourself.

Medal prizes will be awarded in each event.

In addition to the races already described there will be special features in the form of match races, a hockey game between fast teams and other exciting contests suitable for an Ice Carnival.

Fill Out Your Blank Now.

To enter in a championship event a skater must be registered with the New England Skating Association. Skaters who are not registered up to date should do so at once in order to be eligible for the championship events.

On account of the short time remaining before the Carnival prospective contestants who are not registered should lose no time in attending to this. Write your communications on registration to Arthur L. Johnson, secretary, No. 180 Devonshire street, Boston.

In the open-for-all events it is only necessary that the contestant make entry by filling out one of the entry blanks printed in to-day's AMERICAN and mailing it to the Ice Carnival Editor of the AMERICAN as directed.

Remember, this registration is necessary only in the championship events, but entry is necessary for all events.

All entries, requests for information and so on, must be addressed to the Ice Carnival Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass.

SOCIALISTS MAY GET 100 SEATS

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Returns received to-day indicated that the Socialists would come near fulfilling their predictions that they would increase their seats in the Reichstag to 100 in yesterday's general election throughout the empire.

Among the results from 207 districts on the first ballot the returns gave the Socialists 66 seats, a net gain of 29. Other results were: Centre, 85; Conservatives and Free Conservatives, 35; Liberals, 4; Radicals, 2; Danes, 1; Poles, 14.

The chief feature of the election was the fact that the Socialists have made their gains at the expense of the other devisions of the radical parties while the reactionaries, according to the scattered results, held their own.

The greatest triumphs of the Socialists were in the big cities. They won all their seats except in Frankfort-on-the-Main and one district each in Dresden and Munich where there is to be a second ballot.

The Socialists retained six of their seven seats in Greater Berlin on the first ballot and their leaders claimed that they would beat Herr Kaempf, the solitary radical, on the second ballot.

The chief plank in the Socialist platform is abolition of the monarchy. They have also declared in favor of abolition of a standing army and the creation of a national guard.

BOSTON BROKER HELD FOR GRAND LARCENY

A requisition signed by Governor Foss will be sent to New York to-day for the extradition of Alfred A. Mulliken, a Boston broker, who is wanted in this city on an indictment warrant charging him with thirty counts of grand larceny. Mulliken's home is in Newton but he was arrested at No. 306 East Twenty-first street, New York, where he had been living since he left Boston. Mulliken was a partner with one Benjamin H. Cram in operating a brokerage office in Boston. A week ago the office was closed.

GARDEN SHOW ENDS TO-NIGHT

By J. C. KERRISON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—It is rather a notable fact that this, the last day of the Madison Square Garden pleasure car show, finds the largest attendance of the season. There seems to be a greater influx of visitors than on any previous day, and can, perhaps, be accounted for by the fact that the Central Palace show is just coming into full bloom as the former is approaching the final stage.

Interest in the shows was never so great as it is this year, and shows have never been more plentiful. The moment that the Garden show closes to-night will begin the exodus of the pleasure cars and the genesis of the commercial cars, for the show which opens in the Garden on Monday night. These exhibits with the commercial cars on display in the Palace show will bring into the city the greatest line of motor trucks that has ever been seen here at one time. In the closing hours of the show the knowing ones are taking their last look over the field, and making their final choice. While the Garden show ends to-night the one at the Palace, where is seen both pleasure and commercial cars, in gasoline and electric, will continue for four days more and is sure to attract the great attention that has up-to-date been awarded the same.

Among the cars displayed at he Palace show none attracted greater attention than does the little Metz manufactured in Waltham and sold in Boston by the Hollander Company and which by the way is the lowest priced pleasure car in the show. The work of this car in the recent Glidden tour has earned for it no small amount of laurels and it is making a decided hit here.

Among the salient features of the R. C. H. design is the fact that the motor is cooled by the thermo-syphon system. The cylinders are a monobloc casting and the crankshaft is carried upon two bearings. The valve action of the motor is entirely inclosed, but so arranged that it may be readily inspected by the removal of a cover plate. The gearset housing an integral part of the rear axle, is of one-piece construction throughout. Another feature is the location of the control level in the centre. The driver sits on the left, which places the lever at his right.

Stulz Car Admired.

The Stulz car is another one that is making a hit. The car that "made good in a day" has a four-cylinder, T-head motor of 4¾ inches bore by 5½ inches stroke. The crankshaft is hollow, and is a high grade, stel-drop forging provided with long white bronze bushings. The bearings are adjustable by means of through bolts. The multiple-disk clutch runs in oil. The transmission and differential housing form a unit with the semi-floating axle, which was designed by Stutz. The design of the car is underslung, with a road clearance of ten inches. A Gemmer steering gear is used.

The Bergdoll 30 has a greater brother in the "40," a new car in which the cylinders are cast enbloc. The clutch is of the multiple-disk type and is encased in a continuation of the crankcase. The gearset is of the four-speed, and reverse type, running upon bearings of the annular-ball type. The gear is lubricated by the splash system in the same manner as used in the previous Bergdoll models, while ignition is taken care of by a Bosch magneto of the easy-starting type. A self-starter of the Ever-Ready type is included in the equipment of the "40," if it is so specified by the customer.

The Marion products have entered the long-stroke class, the motors of models 48 and 35 being made 4⅛ by 5½ inches, and 4 by 4½ inches respectively. The valves are 2¼ inches in diameter, and inclosed to insure noiseless performance. The size of push rod rollers has been increased. The crankshaft has been increased in side, being 2¼ inches in diameter and supported by three bearings. The rear axle has been improved in its details, being of the semi-floating type on the smaller 35, and floating on the 48.

Big Display of Cole Cars.

A decidedly excellent display is made of Cole cars, whose Boston representatives, the Babisch boys, are now here. All of the Cole cars are electrically lighted.

An entirely new roadster has been brought out for this season. It has a long hood, wide scoop body and a well-shaped cowl, from which the side lights protrude. The 1912 Cole is known as the 30-40 instead of being called a 30-horse-power car, as formerly. Timken floating axles and Timken roller bearings have been added, as well as a Torsion-Rod of V-shape. The adoption of the Queen Anne style of body panels and doors is noticeable. All door latches are placed inside and the trimmings are of nickel. As in the last year's models, the lubrication is by splash, but the method differs in that it is noncirculating.

¶ ANOTHER SLANDER NAILED: Women do NOT vote for the handsomest candidate! Wasn't Job Harriman, the Socialist, beaten in Los Angeles by Alexander? He was. One by one the arguments of those who are opposed to suffrage have been exploded and turned against them. The Sunday AMERICAN will devote two pages to some of these explosions. We advise every anti-Suffragist in New England to read this article in the Sunday AMERICAN.

BURTON HOLMES' NEW TRAVEL LECTURES

Burton Holmes was enthusiastically greeted last night at Tremont Temple, when he gave the first of a new series of travel lectures, "The Americans of South America." In order to begin at the beginning, as he said, he devoted the opening talk to Spain and Portugal, the countries which furnished the discoverers, conquerors and settlers of the continent to the south. Madrid was the subject of a particularly interesting group of views. The second part of the talk was devoted to Portugal, and many scenes in Lisbon were shown, including views taken during the recent revolution. The concluding view was that of Europe's westernmost cape, looking out over the Atlantic toward the New World. The lecture was repeated this afternoon.

¶ GOT A MINUTE? HOW MANY TIMES SHOULD A WOMAN MARRY? Lillian Russell's fourth husband raises the question whether it is respectable for a woman to have an unlimited number of matrimonial affairs. Several women of distinction have answered the question for the Boston Sunday AMERICAN, among them the beautiful Miss Russell herself. Won't you want to read it?

MAP FEATURE OF BOOK OFFER

One of the issues in the coming national campaign will be, it is expected, the famous controversy over coal lands and timber rights in Alaska. The Alaskan situation will be discussed on the stump and the voters will be asked to consider the problem carefully.

Few people realize how big Alaska is. It is large enough to cover Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska completely and part of South Dakota, Wisconsin and Oklahoma in addition. One of the best ways to get a vivid idea of the size of Alaska is to take a map of it and place it on a map of the United States of the same scale. But this is not possible, in the ordinary atlas, unless you cut out the map of Alaska and overlay it on the United States map. And at that the Alaskan map may not be drawn to the same scale as the United States map.

Here is just where the New Census Atlas of the World is particularly valuable. Among its many maps are two showing European countries scaled to the United States and the size of the United States' own island possessions and Alaska when compared with the mother country.

The New Census Atlas of the World is one of the three books included in the latest and best coupon offer of the AMERICAN. Fuller accounts of this offer will appear in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

PIANO WAREROOMS

BARGAINS in nearly 200 pianos, new and second hand. We trade DIRECTLY with the public without the intervention of "canvassers." See the splendid line of new pianos by various makers we offer at $150, $175, $200, $225, $250; payable $10 down and $5 per month; used instruments taken in exchange. Remember, there are factories turning out pianos which they sell to dealers for $70 to $85. We know of some dealers and canvassers who try to get from $250 to $300 for these same pianos. Protect yourself against such methods by relying upon an old, established house that GUARANTEES the RIGHT value in all its transactions. We believe in "one price to all" and give the same inducements to the humblest buyer as to the most expert. Every one invited to inspect our offerings which, at the prices marked, we believe are unequalled in this market. Established 1863. Always under the same management. HENRY F. So-Called "Local" Newspapers—and Especially Country Weeklies—Constitute the Greatest Force for Good in America

Unfortunately the Usefulness and Power of the Local Press Are Not Appreciated. And Advertisers Fail to Take Advantage of the Great Distributing Power of the Press of Small Cities, Towns and Villages

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

The Hearst newspapers have more than once called the attention of business men and of citizens in general to the important work that is done by the editors of the smaller newspapers and to the great value of those newspapers AS ADVERTISING MEDIUMS.

It would be impossible to keep this government going, impossible at least to keep REPRESENTATIVE and democratic government alive in this country, if it were not for the thousands of newspaper editors scattered throughout the land—every one of them a watcher and an observer, a vigilant policeman in politics and public affairs.

Wherever two railroads cross in the United States and there is a town or village, there is—fortunately for the country—A LOCAL EDITOR.

The editor watches the two railroads, he watches the affairs of his township, county, State and Nation.

He talks daily or weekly to his fellow-citizens concerning affairs that most vitally interest them. He is for them an eye that does not sleep, a man alert and devoted to those that are his constituents.

If the railroad crossing kills too many, if the railroads combine to charge too much or serve too poorly, if the Judge, Governor or Mayor seems more of a railroad official than a people's official, the editor is there to tell about it.

Big metropolitan newspapers with circulations running into many hundreds of thousands daily have a peculiar power of their own.

But if you took all the metropolitan newspapers of the United States and weighed them in the balance against the press of the small cities and towns in America, it would be as though you weighed a city office building against Pike's Peak—and the local press would be Pike's Peak.

The local editor speaks to his readers as one friend speaks to another.

They know him by sight. They know his record. They know the hard fight that he has made and is making. They know for how small a reward he renders efficient, unselfish service. And a word from him means more than many columns from some anonymous and unknown "editor of the big city."

The politicians of this country know well the power of the local editor. They respect it and fear it—and it is a good thing for the country that they do.

A man writing fearlessly in some Congressman's or some Senator's home town can do more to keep that public official "straight" than all the metropolitan newspapers put together.

Public men know the power of the local editor and of the local newspaper. It is a pity that the business men of the country are ignorant of that power.

The man who has something really worth while to advertise could, if he would use the local newspapers intelligently, multiply his sales by ten, make himself known to millions that do not now know him and put himself at the head of his line of competition.

If the automobile manufacturers, for instance, would put their advertising intelligently in the local newspapers, paying a good, fair rate and offering good value, they could very soon change the output of automobiles in America from 140,000 in one year, which was the record of 1910, to 500,000 or 1,000,000 in one year—and this is no exaggeration.

The smallest of the country newspapers has among its readers one or five or ten or a hundred men that could be made to buy a car now and will buy one sooner or later. Some intelligent automobile manufacturer with the right kind of product will realize this and sell tens of thousands of cars through the local newspapers before his competitors know what has happened.

The average of prosperity and of wealth among the readers of a country newspaper is far greater than among the readers of a metropolitan daily, and in proportion to the cost of advertising, intelligent publicity through the country newspapers gives by far the best results.

What we have said about automobile advertising refers to advertising in other lines. The dwellers in the cities, readers of the metropolitan dailies, have before their eyes the temptations and attractions of the great stores which cannot be reached by the reader of the country newspaper. If our business men realized their opportunities they would fight for parcels post, and they would make of every country newspaper an active distributing agency, doubling and trebling the country's prosperity and industrial activity.

This we have said before, and we shall say it again. Inasmuch as there are no Hearst newspapers in the country, inasmuch as our newspapers are published exclusively in the great cities of the country, we shall at least be credited with unselfishness in making a fight for local editors that deserve the thanks and appreciation and financial encouragement of every good citizen.

Very few realize what it means when a man undertakes the publication of a daily or a weekly newspaper in a small place.

The editor risks everything, poverty, bankruptcy, indifference of the public, and at best his reward can be very small.

It is said that Mr. Bryan is going to oppose the election to the Presidency of Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, because the latter before he started out toward the White House asked Mr. Carnegie, of the Steel Trust, to give him a life pension.

Many of us, of course, would feel happier if we could begin our work with a life pension that would free us from all care ever afterward.

The country editor especially would be made comfortable and free from worry for himself and for his family if there were some Steel Trust or Oil Trust billionaire ready to offer a pension to those beginning hard work.

But the country editor goes to work WITH NO PENSION AND NO GUARANTY. He asks no pension, no cash in advance, only fair play and a chance to work.

To the man who has started his own small paper and is fighting his way up hill with a little type and a small press, paying the highest price for everything and getting the lowest price for his advertising and his hard work, there seems something very comical in the sight of a man like Governor Wilson giving up a position as university president that paid him nearly $10,000 a year, taking a large salary as Governor of New Jersey, publicly bidding for the United States Presidency with its $75,000 salary, AND AT THE SAME TIME ASKING MR. CARNEGIE, OF THE STEEL TRUST, TO PUT HIM ON HIS PENSION LIST AND MAKE IT EASY AND SAFE FOR HIM TO BE HONEST EVER AFTER.

The country editor is the man who ought to have a pension for the work that he does, if any man ought to have it. He is also the man, as it happens, who would not take a pension from the Steel Trust, or from the railroad that runs through his town, or from any other agency of public exploitation.

That is why we have in the past and do to-day and shall in the future try to impress on our readers and on big advertisers the fact THAT THEY SHOULD DO THEIR SHARE TOWARD SUPPORTING THE LOCAL PRESS OF THIS COUNTRY. There would be and could be no philanthropy about it, simply wise self-interest should make every citizen buy his local paper and make every advertiser contribute according to his means to the support of the local press.

The citizen that buys his local paper gets his money back many times over in protection of his interests. And the man who advertises widely and wisely in the local press gets his money back many times over in cash returns.

The people should not be niggardly in support of those that do good work. Business men and the public generally should be especially broad-minded and liberal in their support of the local newspapers that represent and intensify public opinion throughout the country.

A Secret Cult Whose Doings Would Recall the Destroyed Cities of the Plain

Teachings and Practices of a Debasing Cult With Many Followers Exposed for First Time in To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN

The secrets of an Oriental cult which has gained a foothold in this country, gathering hundreds of wealthy women within its poisonous folds, and which in reality maintains conditions that would have made the inhabitants of ancient Sodom and Gomorrah sit up and take notice, will be told in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN, so far as a newspaper can print them.

The astonishing story is not one of hearsay. It is told by the so-called high priest of the cult himself, but it was meant only for those admitted to the mystic circle. Into the hands of the Sunday AMERICAN came the self-styled prophet's depraved teachings, suavely disseminated in the incense-breathing guise of a philosophy that appeals to the highest and best that is in one.

It tells the story of a cult that should be rooted from the American soil and its high priest placed behind iron bars as a teacher of immorality and vice.

Level-headed, pure-minded people will be astonished to learn that in Boston and other New England cities there are followers of this false and faking philosopher.

The shameful story of how the late Mrs. Ole Bull, wife of the famous violinist, became a victim of an Indian philosophy that shortened her life, is fresh in the minds of the people of New England, having come out in court over the contest of her will.

But the Vedanta teachings were nobly elevating in comparison with the weird coterie to be exposed for the first time in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It is a feature story that everybody will want to read, telling, as it does, what its followers are most anxious to keep from the light of day.

He Writes About Pa's Miner Friend

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA joined a library last nite, I doant know how he caim to do it, but he joined. He caim hoam with two books, Gold Digging in Alaska & the Rise & Fall of Nome.

I am glad you joined the library, said Ma, but what in the wurld made you pick out such funny books. Why dident you git sum nice fikshun? sed Ma, sum of them books that is read everyware. I was reeding one the other day called The Pursuit of Phyllis. It was wrote by a yung man naimed Bacon, sed Ma, & I red the whole first chapter while I was waiting for the milkman to bring his bill. That is what I call literatur, sed Ma, fikshun. It grips one so, & hoalds them intense until the end of the last chapter.

But this is a practical set of books wich I have, sed Pa, it is all about gold digging & that is the only subjeck that I care to read about jest now, it is jest what I want, beekaus I am going to entertain a mining frend of mine tonite, he is cumming here to the house rite after dinder, & I want to know sumthing about placer mines & quartz & pintz, etc. I want him to think that I am a mining expert, too, Pa sed.

Well, sed Ma, that is you all oaver aggann. You was born to be a kind of four (4) flusher, sed Ma, & I am afrade you will nevver git oaver it. You know as well as you know you are setting here that you nevver did any mining, & now you cum hoam with sum books that will help you to talk wise. Why doant you jest try to be natral? sed Ma. I think you wud find that it wud pay better.

Pa dident say anything back, he went into the library & started for to read his books & after he had read for about a hour his mining frend caim in. He was one of the biggest men wich I have evver saw. He was about six feet & six inches & his shoulders was as wide as Mister Taft's & his chest was as big as Mr. Roosevelts. His naim was Lynch, Mister Paddy Lynch of Nome & Skagway.

I am very glad to know you, Mister Lynch, sed Ma, my husband was telling me about you. My husband is a miner also, sed Ma, he was out in Californy during the gold craze many yeers ago & he was also a vary sucsessful copper miner in Arizony.

Mister Lynch was looking at Pa kind of close & Pa was gitting kind of red in the face. I am glad to meet a fellow miner at all times, sed Mister Lynch, did you evver work in the gold feelds?

Indeed he did, sed Ma, & in the diamond mines. I am so proud of my brave husband, Ma sed.

Oh, sed Pa, it was one of them placer quartz mines, whare you have to tunnel about ten miles & then brake up the sand in a smelter.

Goodnite, sed Mister Lynch. You ain't a miner. Goodnite, lady, he sed to Ma. I hoap yure littel boy won't have to lissen to many fairy tales from yure husband. The boy has truthful eyes, it wud be a shaim to spoil him. Goodnite, lady.

Why Woman's Cause Must Triumph

By Dr. Max Nordau, author of "Degeneration," "The Right to Love," etc. The ingenious and philosophic Dr. Nordau explains in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN that when academies and Kings have spoken against an idea, its hour of final victory must be at hand. See

To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Uncle Sam's Life-Saving Heroes Appeal to the Nation for Justice

Sunday's AMERICAN will vividly describe how the rich and powerful United States government deserts the army of men who rescue hundreds of lives and save millions of dollars' worth of property every year, when they are crippled by disease or accident or old age. The nation has never provided for pensions for these brave men, who are paid the mere pittance of $65 a month. Boston and New England are interested in caring for the life-savers when they can no longer risk their lives to save those of others. Don't fail to read about the fight now being made for them in Congress, as told in

To-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN
